4-H Training Aids Youths In Adjustments To Life

By JIM D. HEMMINGS Asst. Agri. Ext. Agt.

One of the vital tasks in society today is that of providing youth with educational experiences that prepare them to adjust to the greatest scientific break-through in history and become productive, responsible citizens.

North Carolina's young people are in the midst of social and economic change. Impacts fall heavily upon them and show up in exceedingly complex situations. Programs that help our youth adjust to these changes are vital to the future of this state.

Next, we must help our youth to strengthen inter-personal relationships. The necessary beneficial relationships between individuals and groups are based on a feeling and perception of reliance and confidence in each other.

Our society urgently needs to strengthen its basic social unit - the family. Youth need to develop willingness to share and accept family responsibility, respect the values and interests of others, willingness to face problems and work through differences and to appreciate the home and family even in adversity.

The teen years represent the most impressionable period of life when meaningful activity can help youth meet the need to render service. Youth needs to learn the importance of giving to others in return for what they have received and to be socially responsible in their changing life roles.

First: a realistic sense of self. Youth who lack a sense of personal identity and self-worth need to have help in developing more self-confidence and self-reliance, to encourage him to understand himself in part through appropriate relationship with family peers and other associates, to direct him in social skills through constructive group experiences that incorporate social responsibilities and guide him towards useful adulthood.

Secondly: We need creative and productive adults to assist the young person in exploring the world of work as one of the most difficult decisions faced by a young individual in his choice of a career. A lack of knowledge of career opportunities and realistic aspirations doom many youth to years of unrewarding search and frustration.

Some other way adults can help young people in 4-H work are: 1. Improve communication skills. 2. Strengthen physical and mental health. 3. Teach youth to use leisure time more profitably. 4. Encourage youth to develop an appreciation of beauty and art.

5. Help 4-H youth acquire a zest for life-long learning. In our 4-H youth program, we are in dire need of adult leaders who can help our young people to develop into responsible citizens. To do this, we must help in several important areas. Let me mention a few and discuss them briefly with you. First, we must help our youth develop competency in citizenship roles. Effective citizenship in a democracy calls for strengthening the abilities and commitment of our young people towards positive constructive citizenship.

School Night For Scouting

Governor Bob Scott has proclaimed the evening of October 15 as "School Night for Scouting," throughout North Carolina.

WHEREAS, The Boy Scouts of America, the Nation's largest youth organization, was founded February 8, 1910, and chartered by the Congress in 1916 for the purpose of promoting "the ability of boys to do things for themselves and others, to train them in Scoutcraft, to teach them patriotism, courage, self-reliance, and kindred virtues";

WHEREAS, Since its founding 59 years ago, the Boy Scouts of America has given over 44 million boys unique training which has provided them with an appreciation of nature, conservation, and outdoor life, while instilling in them the principles of good citizenship so ably expressed in the Scout Oath and the Scout Law;

WHEREAS, This year, the 6-million adult and boy members of the Boy Scouts of America have launched a dynamic, long-range expansion plan known as BOYPOWER '76 that will extend to 1976, the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Using as its theme "America's manpower begins with BOYPOWER," the Boy Scouts expects to reach out to serve one out of three boys and make Scouting more relevant to the needs and concerns of today's youth;

NOW THEREFORE, I Robert W. Scott, Governor of the State of North Carolina, in recognition of its past achievements and its promise for the future of our youth, do hereby declare and proclaim the evening of October 15, 1969, as School Night for Scouting in this state. All schools and personnel are urged to conduct meaningful and appropriate observations, and cooperate fully in the School Night program in recognition of the material contributions of the Boy Scouts of America to the Nation and this State."

ing 59 years ago, the Boy Scouts of America has given over 44 million boys unique training which has provided them with an appreciation of nature, conservation, and outdoor life, while instilling in them the principles of good citizenship so ably expressed in the Scout Oath and the Scout Law;
