Upon graduation from college 52 years ago Friday was employed by the largest sugar processor in the country. He said that although the processing of the sugar beet was seasonal the work was long and hard, lasting 12 hours a day for seven days a week.

Friday said that his first impression upon arriving in Montana was "Where are all the trees?"

The sugar beet, Friday said, is grown on contract and harvested and processed during the coldest month. He had several sugar beets to show the Rotarians and it would appear they would weigh from seven to 10 pounds each. He said each beet would produce 17% of its weight in pure sugar with the by-products being used for livestock feed.

Friday said that most of the sugar consumed west of the Mississippi is from sugar beets and east of the Mississippi from sugar cane. Transportation costs are the reason, he said.

Friday left his job with the sugar beet company to go with Dupont where he became one of the company's top executives. At Dupont he played a large part in the development of smokeless powder.

Guests at the meeting were Roger Peeler, Howard Daniel, Vernon Whitmore and Mr. Culp.
