Two Leaf Barns Among Fire Losses

Two tobacco barns and their contents were destroyed by fire during the past week and tobacco in a third barn was damaged by smoke.

A tobacco barn on the Churchill Road owned by George Willis Shearin and operated by Doug Jones, a tenant, was completely destroyed by fire on Thursday of last week. The log barn was ignited when a stick of tobacco fell on a burner. Loss was estimated at $2000. Two trucks from the Warrenton rural company responded.

On the previous afternoon at 2:40 o'clock eight men and two trucks from the Drewry rural fire company were dispatched to the farm of the late A. D. Bullock in the Bullockville section of Vance County due to smoke pouring from a tobacco barn. No fire was found but the tobacco was damaged by smoke. The barn and tobacco belonged to Calvin Howerton.

The third barn fire was on the Kenneth Mustian farm near Warrenton where a log and frame tobacco barn was on fire. Two alarms for this fire were turned in on Monday of this week, the first at 11:40 a. m. and the second at 2 p. m. Six men and two trucks from the Warrenton rural company were dispatched to the scene and extinguished the fire with water. Damage to the barn was estimated at 50 percent and tobacco loss was 100 percent.

Senior Club Goes On Enjoyable Trip

By MRS. JOYCE MABRY
The Norlina Senior Social Club just sponsored and returned from a scenic trip to Charlottesville and Staunton, Va.

Leaving the Norlina United Methodist Church, they stopped for a break in Richmond, and from there headed for Charlottesville. Eating lunch at the University of Virginia Cafeteria, they headed up into the autumn-colored hills to Monticello, Thomas Jefferson's home. Blustering winds did not dampen spirits. Touring the home and the grounds recalled days of old and the feeling of what it must have been like in Jefferson's day when autumn winds blew.

James Monroe's home, Ashlawn, was the next stop. Renovations on the grounds promise a lovely memorial to this President. Peacocks roamed the grounds. When asked why such an abundance of peacocks, the group was told, "They are good lawn trimmers, and then, too, no one realized they were so prolific in reproduction, next to rabbits," the guide with raised eyebrows said.

The Greyhound bus, driven by Joe D. Williams of Raleigh, headed for Holiday Inn South in Charlottesville. Dinner was followed by a pack-the-room party. Thirty-eight people were well to wall, in one motel room, where tall tale exchanges proved a highlight of the trip.

Friday morning dawned with profuse rain. At the entrance to Skyline Drive, the senior citizen's group ate at the Howard Johnson's Restaurant. A few telephone calls changed the agenda for the day from a walking tour of Natural Bridge to a tour of Swannanoa, the University of Natural Science and Philosophy. It is a magnificent Italian marble palace high above Waynesboro, Va. Now a museum, it also displays the sculpture and art of Walter and Lao Russell.

The peak of this tour came with the appearance of Mrs. Lao Russell on the marble stairway, just below an exquisite stained glass window. An inspiring lecture from this noble lady and the purchase and autographing of her works excited all. Precipitation interspersed with sleet and snow and rain only made that mountain trip experience more of an adventure.

The site of Woodrow Wilson's birthplace in Staunton, Va., was next on the agenda. A film and a tour concluded the day.

Weary, all boarded to head for Richmond, and dinner at the S and W Cafeteria. As Bing Crosby's death was announced, a musical tribute was sung by the cafeteria manager, and became part of the memory of this special trip. Arriving in Norlina by 8 p. m. all felt their two days had been great.

I am interested in Warrenton and its future, and would appreciate your support
