Each member of the circle had prepared a covered dish. The meal consisted of food representing home mission areas and foreign mission countries where Southern Baptist missionaries are currently serving.

Summer Stains Can Be Removed

Summer vacation time is when children's clothing is most prone to show difficult stains and when mothers are most apt to need help removing them.

The most common of the stubborn summer stains are blood, grass, tar, chewing gum and red clay, according to Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University.

For removing blood stains, Miss Tutterow recommends lukewarm water and an enzyme pre-soak. Launder the garment after presoaking. If the stain is stubborn, a couple of drops of ammonia may help remove it.

Sliding into second base may produce grass stains that require a bit of extra help. Here, Miss Tutterow recommends the enzyme pre-soak again, laundering and bleaching, if necessary.

For tar, place a towel under the stained portion of the clothing and apply cleaning fluid, Miss Tutterow says. Then place the article in the wash. "A couple of drops of ammonia may help," she notes.

Cleaning fluid is available at most drug stores. Miss Tutterow recommends a shoetype brush for cleaning off the tar and a medicine dropper for applying ammonia.

Chewing gum can be removed with a dull knife. "Use ice to harden the gum and then scrape off the residue," Miss Tutterow recommends. Then soak the affected areas in cleaning fluid and launder.

The red clay so common in this part of the country requires a chlorine bleach, Miss Tutterow says. Before bleaching, apply a heavy-duty detergent to the stain and brush with a shoe brush.

Then mix one teaspoon of bleach to one tablespoon of water, Miss Tutterow says. Apply to garment with dropper and do not allow bleach to remain more than two minutes. Remove bleach by flushing with water and apply one teaspoon white vinegar.

Remember to treat all stains promptly and test all stain removers on hidden parts of the garment.

Liquid soap has been around since 1865.

Day Camp Is Held For GA's On Lake

A Girls in Action - Cullom Association Day Camp was held recently on Lake Gaston at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Potter.

Registration began at 10 a. m. and name tags were pinned on, made by the G. A. girls of Carey Baptist Church.

Mrs. Estelle Robertson, G. A. director of the Cullom Association, welcomed the girls and their leaders and visitors. Randy Daniel, associate pastor of Warrenton Baptist Church, led them in a sing-a-long, followed by a devotional and prayer.

Mrs. Cornelia Walker, a missionary in Taiwan, now in Henderson, was present. She is a member of the Second Baptist Church, where her husband is pastor of the church. She shared some of her experiences while in Taiwan and was attired in native dress. She taught the girls songs in the native language, and showed them the different musical instruments that were used.

She then explained how eager these native people were to study and learn about the love of Jesus Christ.

The girls were then divided into groups. There was a mission study through puppets, led by Mrs. Dianne Currin, Misses Gwen Allen and Donna Capps of Norlina Baptist Church.

Handicraft was led by Mrs. Dianne Neal of Warrenton Baptist Church.

Fun games led by Mrs. Sarah Joe Hayes of Wise Baptist Church.

Chorus Singing was led by Randy Daniel of Warrenton, David Smith and Greg Jackson, who are summer resort missionaries of the Cullom Association stationed in Warrenton.

Lunch was served on the lawn and everybody enjoyed the fellowship of the girls, their leaders, and pastors and their wives.

The afternoon session was the same, divided in groups and all the girls had a choice to participate in all the activities.

It was a most enjoyable day and everyone left with a feeling of spiritual fellowship and love for one another.

The group also thanked Mr. and Mrs. Potter for being so gracious to allow them to have such a wonderful program on their spacious lawn and in their home.

There were around 85 girls, leaders and visitors present.

Four-Legged Cures

If you suffer from heart disease or stress, a cuddle a day may keep the doctor away. But if hugs are hard to come by, the next best thing may be a dog or a cat in the lap, scientists say.

A study at the University of Maryland Hospital in Baltimore found that heart patients who own pets have a better chance of survival than those who don't.

The study involved 92 coronary disease patients who had suffered heart attacks or severe chest pains. One year after hospitalization, nearly one third of the patients without pets died. During that same period only 3 of the 53 patients with pets died.

Research indicates that pets also encourage exercise, especially jogging, which strengthens heart muscles. Scientists have also discovered that for those people with high blood pressure, silence is indeed golden, and that a quiet friend like a dog or cat can soothe the owners' nerves.
