TIPS TO LENGTHEN LIFESPAN OF FLOWERS

In these inflationary times, it's wise to try to make things last as long as possible, and that even includes flowers with their admittedly short lifespan.

With proper care and handling, flowers and the pleasure they give will last longer than you think, according to the F.T.D. Consumer Information Service, which has these tips for flower lovers.

Unwrap your flowers immediately. If they're brought to you as a gift, at a party you're hosting for example, you might enlist a guest to lend a hand. It's not an emergency room situation where minutes count, but hours certainly do. You will want to do the following as soon as possible:

- If the flowers are in an arrangement, add tepid water to the container.
- If you have loose flowers, cut each stem on a slant with a sharp knife—never with a scissors, which bruises the delicate cell structure of the stem and might prevent the flower from "drinking" water.
- For woody stemmed flowers, such as chrysanthemums, lilac, dogwood or forsythia, you will need to pound the end of the stems so that they can take up water more easily.
- Choose an appropriate container that won't constrict the flowers, but not so big that they will simply flop over.

• Fill the container with tepid water—never too hot or too cold because you can shock the flowers' systems. One F.T.D. florist has said, "They have feelings, too!" The tepid water ensures that the flowers will drink more quickly, a sort of nourishment for getting them out of the shock of being cut.

• If you have a packet of commercial preservative, use it—it's better than any of the faddish ideas you've heard of—and costs very little.

• Re-cut the stems every two or three days, again on a slant, and add fresh, tepid water daily to the vase or arrangement.

• Never pu. flowers in direct, strong sunlight or on top of the TV set or a heating unit.
