Brenda Mitchiner, who teaches sign language at Gallaudet College, pointed out that "when the kids are mainstreamed, they're on their own. Half of the kids just nod their heads whether they understand or not."

"The only thing that will save them is books," she said. But because English is their second language, many deaf people don't enjoy reading, according to Mitchiner.

Some schools spend so much time teaching deaf children English that other subjects are neglected, Mitchiner claimed.

"Many deaf people are not satisfied with the present educational system," she said. "We want deaf children to get as much as hearing children."

Brenda and John Mitchiner were both born into hearing families and lost their auditory sense at a young age. Their children were also born hearing.

But while Brenda's hearing progressively worsened, her son John lost his suddenly after he was hit by a swing at about 18 months. Tyson's hearing

Halifax EMC Last-Minute

Halifax EMC has won a last-minute reprieve from a 16 percent hike in the cost of bulk power from Carolina Power and Light Company, which supplied about 24 percent of their Enfield based Cooperatives' wholesale power purchases.

The reprieve came Tuesday of last week when the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ordered a five-month suspension of the higher rates, which had been set to become effective this week, according to James Ellen, manager of Halifax EMC.

Under the agency's procedures, wholesale rate hikes are allowed to become effective after a suspension of from one day up to five months.

Representatives of the 18 EMCs and the 25 municipal electric systems which buy CP&L wholesale power had petitioned FERC for the five-month suspension and for an overall rate reduction.

Ellen said the suspension will mean the new rates cannot take effect until mid-January.

Mrs. Frances Mae George of Warrenton celebrated her 82nd birthday last week by making a contribution to Warren General Hospital. Mrs. George, who said she is interested in seeing the operating room reopened, is shown presenting a check to Hospital Administrator Lynn Orfgen, left, and Roy Pat Robertson, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees. The money was given to Mrs. George in lieu of birthday presents by her three daughters, Willie Mae George of Warrenton, Mrs. Maxine Byrum of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. George Rickman of Wilson. Born in 1899 in Selma, Ala., Mrs. George had nursing training at State Baptist Hospital in Selma before moving to Warrenton's Peck Manufacturing Co. village in 1929. She was the only nurse in this area until the hospital opened. She campaigned to have the hospital built in Warrenton. She used to help the late Dr. F. P. Hunter go into the homes to help in deliveries of babies, and once even helped perform an operation in a home. Both Mr. Orfgen and Mr. Robertson were high in their praise of Mrs. George for her help for the hospital.

Hair Scores Big

When Norlina businessman A. B. Hair made up for never having won anything in his life, he made up in a big way.

Mr. Hair said this week he didn't think his chances were too good when he bought a ticket on a new car as part of a carpet purchase from the L. D. Brinkman Co. of Orlando, Fla.

The drawing for the new car came during the July Carpet Market held in Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Hair, accompanied by his wife, was in attendance at the market, but left before the drawing was held for the new car.

He was reached by telephone in his hotel room to be told that he held the winning ticket. He said he drove the new car home while his wife returned with the car they had driven to Atlanta.

His prize: A white 1981 Cadillac Coupe DeVille, which he points out is the only thing he has ever won.

Mart Does Well

After six sales days, the Warrenton Tobacco Market has posted an average of $151.29 per hundred pounds, George Willis Shearin, sales supervisor, has reported.

Shearin's report came after two days of sales last week in which leaf topped the $150 plateau.

Thus far for the season, Shearin noted, the market has sold 2,126,973 pounds for $3,202,803.
