Two Black Deputies Joining Warren County Sheriff's Force

Two of Warren County's five-man deputy sheriff force will be black, the county's first black sheriff confirmed Tuesday.

Sheriff T. R. Williams, sworn in Monday as the county's highest law enforcement officer, said the two black deputies will be Warren County residents well qualified to handle the work of the department.

One black deputy, Thomas Henry McCaffity, 25, of Afton, was certified as a deputy sheriff Tuesday by the N. C. Department of Justice and took his oath of office about 4 p. m. Tuesday before Clerk of Court Richard E. Hunter, Jr. McCaffity, who is single, has worked as a brick layer and has been taking courses in criminal justice at Vance Granville Community College.

McCaffity filled one of two vacancies in the department created when Williams was elevated to sheriff, and the county's chief deputy, Dorsey Capps, who lost to Williams in last summer's runoff election, was not rehired. Williams said he hopes to fill the remaining vacancy within two weeks.

Three full-time deputies who served under retiring Sheriff Clarence Davis were retained and given their oaths of office Monday afternoon. They are Bobby Dean Bolton, Loyd Newsome and Harold Seaman. Also taking the oath of office as an auxiliary deputy was long-time Warren lawman Roy Clark.

Williams said yesterday that Mrs. Betsy Frazier will continue to serve as the sheriff's secretary, and that Danny Bartholomew, former deputy, will continue to serve papers for the department on a part-time basis.

Sheriff Williams said it will be "some time" before a chief deputy is named, although he said he intends to designate one of his deputies as such.

Energy Application Deadline Nears

RALEIGH — The N. C. Department of Human Resources reminds citizens that December 10 is the deadline to apply for the federal Low-Income Energy Assistance program.

The program provides a one-time payment to help eligible low-income households pay their heating bills this winter. It is not designed to pay all of a household's heating bills, but to provide some relief from the high costs of energy.

"We estimate that some 250,000 low-income households across the state are eligible for the Low-Income Energy Assistance program this year," Bonnie Cramer, assistant director for program administration in the Division of Social Services pointed out. "With the application period more than half complete, we feel there are still many eligible households, including the elderly and disabled, who have not yet applied. We hope poor households understand that they must apply at their county department of social services to be eligible."

Cramer said that elderly or handicapped individuals may send a representative to apply for them or call their county department of social services to make other arrangements.

To be eligible for the Low-Income Energy Assistance program, households must need help with their heating bills, have incomes at or below the 1980 non-farm poverty level, and have financial resources of $2200 or less.

Cramer said a one-time payment will be made in early February after all low-income households have applied and eligibility has been determined.

The arrest, the last made by Deputy Williams before becoming Warren's sheriff this week, followed an investigation of the break-in at Spragins' Grocery.

Brown is charged with throwing a cinder block through the plate glass front door of the grocery and taking a quantity of orange juice, wine, cigarettes and beer.

Soil Sampling Is Good First Step

Agricultural officials with the Agronomic Division of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture agree that taking a good set of soil samples is the first step toward a profitable crop in 1983.

According to Al Hatfield, agronomist in charge of the Soil Testing Section, 188,593 samples were processed for farmers and homeowners last year. Some 709 of those samples originated in Warren County.

Hatfield said, "Every soil sample submitted is tested for lime requirement and levels of phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, manganese, zinc, and copper."

Based on these tests, recommendations are given for the application of various plant food elements needed to produce a particular crop.

"Putting salt on your potatoes before you taste them," is the comparison made by Regional Agronomist Charlie Tyson to the practice of fertilizing without benefit of a soil test. Tyson said that he finds some growers who believe that following soil test recommendations will limit crop production to "average yield levels. He said, "There is absolutely no basis for this assumption. These recommendations are designed to eliminate soil fertility as a yield limiting factor. A farmer can have confidence in the soil test recommendations assuming the samples submitted accurately represent the soils involved."

According to Dr. Ray Tucker, agronomist in charge of the Plant Analysis Section, there is no better way to evaluate the effectiveness of your fertility program throughout the growing season than plant analysis. Plant analysis determines the critical nutrient levels as well as the ratio between these nutrients and makes appropriate suggestions for treatment when these levels and/or balances are not adequate within the plant.

Jack Imbriani, nematologist in charge of the Nematode Advisory Section, suggested that farmers collect additional soil samples for nematode assay when they collect samples for fertility evaluation. Imbriani said, "Only about 50 percent of the 20,000 nematode samples assayed last year had nematode populations high enough to require treatment with nematicides."
