Attends Duke
Computer Camp

Robert J. Richardson, II, of Grove Hill was among the 155 students from across the United States who attended a recent two-week computer camp at Duke University in Durham.

Students were enrolled according to their level of previous camp experiences. Robert studied the basics of computer programming, which consisted of introductions to computer programming, problem solving and lab work.

Each student had an individual project to be completed before the camp ended. Robert's was a video game which he made himself, entitled "Moon Landing," and which was complete with an explosion should the operator fail to land the rocket properly.

Parents and students attended a banquet on the last evening of the camping in the Bryan University Center. Students were given project awards and certificates.

Robert, who will be in the 11th grade at Warren County High School this fall, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Richardson of Rt. 2, Macon.

Rare, With Baked Potato

The day is coming when Americans, notorious for their love of tender steaks, can order-up a custom-made tenderloin from a combination of meats such as ribeye, sirloin and even pork. The process, called co-extrusion, combines lean meat from one source with fat from another and allows processors to mix and match whatever kinds or amounts of meat the consumer desires. Food producers are already using the process to create "bacon" from beef, goat, lamb and mutton.
