Detoxification Proposals Are Heard By Work Group

Two proposals for possible detoxification of the Afton PCB Dump were heard Thursday by an intergovernmental work group meeting in Raleigh, but no action was taken.

Work group members met for the second time in as many months to discuss ways to neutralize PCBs stored in the Warren County landfill since last fall.

Under the leadership of Dr. Daniel A. Okun of Chapel Hill, work group members heard a report from Dr. Louis Centofanti of PPM, Inc. of Tucker, Ga. dealing with detoxification of the dump through a chemical process.

Later members heard a presentation from Byron Moe of Bio-Technica International, Inc. of Springfield, Va. in which the advantages of using bacteria in detoxification of the dump were explained.

Stain Removal Must Be Prompt, Specialist Says

An untreated stain can ruin the prettiest blouse or dress. Dr. Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist-in-charge, North Carolina State University, offers the following general rules for stain removal:

—Treat stains as soon as possible.

—Always test any stain remover on a sample of fabric taken from a seam allowance. To test, apply the amount of product recommended on the package. Let stand 2 to 5 minutes, then rinse. If the color is changed, don't use the product on the article of clothing.

—To treat a stain, place the stained area face down on white paper towels and apply the stain remover to the underside of the stain. The stain will be forced off the surface of the fabric and not through the fabric. Move the stained area frequently to a clean place on the paper towels so that the stain will not be absorbed back into the fabric.

—When using any bleach product, do not try to bleach one spot on a colored garment. Bleach the whole garment to prevent uneven color removal.

who sat in on Thursday's session held in the Administration Building, said all representatives of Warren County who sit on the work group were present.

Local group members are Commissioner George E. Shearin, Sr., Thomas Henry Rooker, Mrs. Joyce Lubbers and the Rev. Luther G. Brown.

Young Man Robbed Of $108 And Pistol

Law enforcement officers are on the lookout for two black males who robbed an employee of the Warren County Ambulance Service at gunpoint early Tuesday morning.

Chief Warren Deputy B. D. Bolton, who investigated the robbery with Deputy Lawrence Harrison, said Clarence Adcock, 21, of Wise, was robbed at about 12:30 a. m. Tuesday as he walked along a rural road a short distance from the Warrenton Bypass near Warren Plains.

Bolton said two men in a red Monte Carlo stopped and offered Adcock a ride. When he declined, the passenger pulled a pistol and asked for his money.

When Adcock replied that he had no money, the robber took his billfold, which contained $108. He then searched Adcock and took a 25-caliber automatic pistol from him.

Deputies reported late Tuesday that they had no suspects in the robbery.

Dump Opposition Urged

"Warren County thinks of itself as a state-wide PCB disposal site," Ferruccio said, "but elsewhere we are seen as a county which is a symbol of resistance" to the unjust location of hazardous waste dumps.

"We can convince government that the last place they want to put this dump is in Warren County, North Carolina," he said. "If the people of Wise stand up and fight it, you will see people all over the nation supporting you."

Ferruccio said North Carolinians need to take a new look at the economic development now being proposed "because it is incompatible with the traditions and values of North Carolina."

He charged that a "few people are chosen to 'bite the bullet' for the sake of industrial development," and said that it would be a death warrant for any community which received a nuclear dump.

Ferruccio said his Concerned Citizens group was just now beginning to research the nuclear waste issue, but that the group remained convinced that "the waste management legislation of the Hunt Administration pre-empted human rights."

Ferruccio and Ruritans discussed the location of a nuclear dump site in Warren County for approximately 90 minutes. No formal action was taken by the Ruritan Club following the session, which was presided over by Ruritan President Steve Young.
