Exceptional Program Has Wide Range Of Services

The Warren County Schools Exceptional Program offers a wide range of services to students in grades K-12. Since its inception, after passage of public law 94-142 guaranteeing appropriate services for all handicapped children ages five to 18. The program has expanded yearly to meet the growing needs of students.

Approximately 473 students receive services across a broad spectrum of categories. Of the 17 special education teachers, eight hold master's level degrees. Some students receive services from two or more areas.

Severely profoundly handicapped children are served at the child development center under the direction of a former special education teacher, Mrs. Fonda Kirk. This program is year round, staffed with three aides and transportation is provided free of charge to parents. Trainable handicapped students are served at the prevocation center at John Graham Middle School. Here students ranging in age from five to 18 learn work skills enabling them to lead independent, self-supporting lives upon graduation. The center is equipped with a working kitchen, bedroom area, sewing machines and simulated work areas. Students graduating from this program are referred to the sheltered workshop in Henderson for further job training if necessary.

Educable mentally handicapped students are served in their respective schools by a resource teacher who also serves the learning disabled population. There are teachers at all levels, K-12. The program for EMH students at Warren County High School is unique in that a complete high school curriculum is offered. Students may choose the entire curriculum or just particular courses in which they are experiencing difficulty in the mainstream. Vocational training program is a strong component. Four teachers conduct the classes with the assistance of aides. Students who may have dropped out in the past now find the special help and encouragement needed to stay in school. One speech/language teacher serves students in grades K-12 who exhibit moderate to severe speech or language disorders. This teacher is responsible for screening and testing students as well as on-going therapy.

Warren County's 19 hearing-impaired students receive services from two hearing-impaired teachers who move from school to school during the week providing services such as speech, reading, audiological management, tutoring and special assistance to regular teachers who have these children in their classrooms.

They also conduct the annual hearing screening and are available for parent consultations concerning hearing problems. One hundred and forty five gifted students have been identified according to state guidelines involving a variety of tests and screening devices. Services are offered from grades one through eight with courses planned for the second trimester at Warren County High School. One teacher provides enrichment classes at all schools except Northside Elementary and Mariam Boyd. A regular classroom teacher, certified in gifted, provides enrichment at Mariam Boyd. Enrichment activities include the teaching of thinking skills in the early grades, the study of literature and philosophy in the middle grades and computer programming at the high school level.

In addition to special programs, homebound services are provided for any students who will be hospitalized/homebound for more than four weeks during the school year. Also, the preschool screening program is funded by the exceptional program to help detect learning problems and provide remediation at the earliest stage possible. This year was the first year of this program and it has been highly successful.

Every year the exceptional teachers sponsor the special olympics; a year long project, with the help of the community and parents. All parents of exceptional children are encouraged to drop by classes frequently and to get involved in any way with their child's class.

Bleach Is One Key To A Cleaner Wash

Chlorine and oxygen-based bleaches whiten fabrics and help remove stains and heavy soils.

"The oxygen-based bleach may be used on all types of fabric. It should be used regularly for best results and can be added along with the detergent," says Dr. Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist - in - charge, North Carolina State University.

It is the chlorine bleach which can cause problems if used improperly. "Always follow the manufacturer's instructions, measure the bleach and always dilute," the extension specialist says. If a chlorine bleach is poured directly onto clothing, the garments may fade or develop white spots. Rips, tears and holes may appear several washings later.

"Use the bleach dispenser if your machine has one, or add bleach to the water-filled tub and then load the clothes," Dr. Tutterow recommends.

Never use chlorine bleach on silk, wool or spandex, non-colorfast fabrics or those with a flame-retardant finish. To test for colorfastness, combine 1 tablespoon of chlorine bleach with ¼ cup of water. With a medicine dropper, put some of the solution on a hidden seam area. Let it stand 1 minute. Blot dry. If there is no color change, the article can be safely bleached.

COMMUNITY HYPERTENSION PROGRAM
Sponsored by Warren County Health Department

Dedicated. How many of us are truly dedicated to something? I know one person who is truly dedicated. That person is Robin Vick, the June-July weigh-in contest winner.

The dictionary gives a formal definition of "dedicated" as being devoted to a cause, ideal, or purpose. Mrs. Vick is certainly dedicated to her purpose; weight loss. Over the last seven months Ms. Vick has lost approximately fifteen pounds. Although to some, this would not seem like much, it is this form of slow weight loss that most usually is never regained. And this dedication of Ms. Vick's towards losing weight is the necessary ingredient for slow weight loss and achievement of her goal.

Another staunch believer in dedication is Mr. W. A. Miles, owner and operator of Miles Hardware, Inc., sponsor of the June-July Weigh-In. As Mr. Miles has stated, "each person should have a goal or purpose throughout his life. And what better purpose could a person have but that of improving his/her health?"

"So many people are dedicated to weight loss but they never seem to lose any weight," stated Mr. Miles. "They always seem to complain about not losing weight, laying the blame on someone or something other than themselves. To be truly dedicated, the person has to take responsibility for his/her own behavior," believes Mr. Miles.

That responsibility Mr. Miles mentioned is the key to dedication. Being dedicated to a goal or purpose automatically makes you responsible for achieving it. Without that feeling of self-responsibility, it becomes very easy to blame your failure on someone or something else. It is this rut that many of us fall into from time to time.

A sincere wish for all dedication needed to reach her goal goes to Ms. Vick, along with congratulations for her every effort up to this point. Sincere thanks go to Mr. Miles and Miles Hardware, Inc. for sponsoring this June-July Weigh-In contest.
