Va. Water Plan Draws Criticism At Rotary Meet

Eastern North Carolina's industrial growth potential is being seriously threatened by the attempts of Tidewater Virginia to tap the water resources of Lake Gaston, members of the Warrenton Rotary Club were told Tuesday night.

Don Everette, director of the Kerr-Tar Regional Council of Governments, told Rotarians that "Warren County is not developed," and future development will be undermined if the City of Virginia Beach is allowed to construct an 88-mile pipeline in order to pump millions of gallons of water each day from Lake Gaston.

"Water is a natural resource and needs to be preserved," Everette said. He urged Rotarians to attend an August 25 hearing on the proposed withdrawal plan, and if unable to attend, to write the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers to register their disapproval. The hearing will be held at 7:30 p. m. at the senior high school in Lawrenceville, Va.

"It's imperative that we go on record showing our overwhelming opposition," Everette said.

He told the civic club members that the chief opponents of the plan, members of the Roanoke River Basin Association, had not gotten the help they deserved from the State of North Carolina, or from Governor Jim Hunt.

He suggested that the fight be waged in the political arena and suggested that Senator Jesse Helms could make political hay if he would take a strong stand against water withdrawal at Lake Gaston.

He also suggested that the Virginia cities looking to Lake Gaston should reuse waste discharge to get pure water, saying it would be cheaper in the long run. "Virginia Beach and the Tidewater area have not explored all possibilities," he charged.

Everette said that the State of Virginia allows 135 million gallons of raw sewage to flow into the Chesapeake Bay every day, and he urged Virginians to get their own house in order as an alternative to tapping Lake Gaston.

Termining the Lake Gaston plan "a quick fix," Everette said that withdrawal from Lake Gaston would have an adverse impact on Kerr Lake and every water reservoir along the rivers which feed Kerr Lake.

Everette said the problem facing Virginia Beach with respect to water is not a problem for that city alone, but a regional problem. He said the Corps of Engineers is a "self-serving entity" and that most of the studies that the Corps had made regarding the withdrawal proposal had been rejected.

Everette was introduced by Brad Carroll, and Steve Medlin presided over the meeting, held at the Warrenton Lions Den.

Following Everette's remarks, members of the Warrenton Rotary Club voted without a dissenting voice to send a letter of protest from the club to Col. R. E. Hudson, district engineer with the Corps of Engineers.

Ceremony Held

A special ceremony was held recently at Spring Street Baptist Church in Henderson to burn the mortgage on the church's new educational building completed in 1980 at a cost in excess of $40,000.

The speaker for the ceremony was the Rev. S. E. Dunston, pastor of Flat Creek Baptist Church of Williamsboro.

The Rev. R. M. Burnette of Warrenton is pastor of the Henderson church and has served the church for 21 years.

The educational facility has six classrooms, restrooms, and a library.
