Birthday Number 57

For most of us frail humans, the passing of years is accompanied by too many undesirable escorts — sagging skin, drooping shoulders, graying hair — and not the least of which is diminished stamina. In the news recently have been a number of characters who have passed the half-century mark and whose countenances sport neither line nor wrinkle and whose energies spurt forth undaunted. How can that be?

Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse marked the passing of his 57th birthday Monday. Today he is every bit as lively as the little mouse which ran around in Disney's chilled studio years ago and which inspired the image of Mickey. The over-50 ranks this year welcome another of Disney's creations, Donald Duck, and Warner Brothers cartoon characters Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, Daffy Duck, Wile E. Coyote, Pepe Le Pew and others of the Merrie menagerie. The "wabbit" is as "wascally," the pig as robust, the duck as frazzled, the coyote as wily and the skunk as amorous in 1985 as in the year of their birth in the 1930's. They just don't age.

Besides that, my children are every bit as entranced by their antics as I was a generation ago. In 50 years, the duck having its beak blown askew by the irate hunter, and even the cat-eat-bird, rabbit-humiliate-duck themes which abound in the scripts, have not aged. The expectations are that they will continue to provide somewhat innocent delight for another millennium or so of children. They are ageless.

The qualities which make a classic, having enduring interest and appeal and permanent and lasting value, appear to be born of the mind and not of the body. Countless are the literary and artistic products of human imagination which do not grow old or show the effects of aging. They appear destined to live into eternity.

On a more serious vein, I recently happened upon a description of a time in history which could not more aptly describe today had it been written this morning:

"The Budget should be balanced. The Treasury should be filled. Public debt should be reduced. The arrogance of officials should be tempered and controlled, and assistance to foreign lands should be curtailed lest we ourselves should become bankrupt. The people should be forced to work and not depend on the Government for subsistence."

The words were penned in the year 60 B. C. by the distinguished Roman orator and statesman, Marcus Tullius Cicero, a contemporary of Julius Caesar. Now, that's no Mickey Mouse.

MRS. EVERETT N. GRAHAM

Graham-Ross Vows Spoken At Elams

The marriage of Penne Marchell Ross and Everett Natonio Graham was recently held at the Elams Chapel United Church of Christ. The Rev. Rollins S. Graham officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, William L. Ross, the bride wore a white chiffon wedding gown with a high collar of chantilly lace with a cameo. The illusion of her gown gave an off-the-shoulder effect accented with a chantilly lace ruffle. She had bishop chiffon sleeves with chantilly lace bridal points. Her full and circular skirt fell to floor length and then flared to an elegant cathedral length. Ruffles cascading the length of her train finished the touches of her gown.

For her headpiece, the bride selected a chantilly lace hat. Her hat was accented with seed pearls and shoulder length lace-trimmed illusion.

Milvett Alston of Forestville, Md., was matron of honor. Maid of honor was Tonya Graham, sister of the groom, of Charlotte. Bridesmaids were Doris Ross and Diana Moody, sisters of the bride, of Littleton; Connie Ruffin, sister of the bride, of Richmond, Va.; Beth Craig of Raleigh; Brenda Ross, sister-in-law of the bride, of Raleigh and Terry Jones of Charlottesville, Va.

Serving as the best man was Michael Jones of Charlottesville, Va. Serving as ushers were William C. Ross, brother of the bride, of Raleigh; Donnie Moody, brother-in-law of the bride, of Littleton; Council Ruffin, Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, of Richmond, Va.; Julius Graham, brother of the groom, of Charlotte; Tony Burroughs and Lenny Massey of Charlotte and Darryl Russell of Durham.

Serving as the flower girl was Latacha Ruffin, niece of the bride, of Richmond, Va.

Donald Moody, II, nephew of the bride, of Littleton was ring bearer.

Music for the wedding was provided by the pianist and vocalist, Kenny White, of Garysburg.

The church was decorated with a 16-candle arch, with a kneeling bench; two baskets of silk flowers; and four arches of eight candles with greenery. On the pews were silk flowers with greenery roped from one pew to another. Lit candles with globes graced the pews.

Serving as the director of the wedding was Patricia Jones, aunt of the bride, of Richmond, Va.; serving as the director of the reception was Helen Clayton-Brown, aunt of the bride, also of Richmond, Va.

A reception followed immediately after the wedding at the Roanoke-Wildwood Bingo Hall in Littleton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Ross of Littleton. A graduate of Louisburg College, she is employed with the
