BLACKSMITH MAY BE HEIR TO MILLIONS

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 21—Through the death of an uncle of whom he had never heard until a week ago, Dennis Rousseau, a blacksmith, living at 557 Jefferson avenue, may be one of the inheritors of an estate of $10,000,000. At least his brother, John, who came to Detroit from Albion to attend the Knights Templars' convocation, told him he was, and Dennis is living in the fond hope that it is true.

According to the incomplete information which Rousseau was able to get from his brother while he was here, their father's only brother, Peter, had gone to California thirty years or more ago and prospered to such an extent that he had become a multimillionaire. At the time of his death he lived at Oakland, just across the bay from San Francisco.

He died several months ago, leaving no children, and the administrators of the estate in their search for heirs managed to locate John Rousseau, a harness maker of Albion. As soon as he heard about the matter John hired a California lawyer to look after his interests.

Everything was proceeding smoothly and it appeared as though a settlement with the eastern heirs of old Peter Rousseau was about to be completed when the San Francisco earthquake occurred and for a time interrupted all business in the coast cities. Since then nothing has been heard of the Rousseau estate, but now that conditions are again settled the Rousseaus expect to hear more regular reports regarding the lengthy legal processes by which they hope to acquire fortune.

There are ten different families of heirs who will come in for a share of the property, Peter Rousseau, the long lost uncle, was a brother of John Rousseau, of Toronto, who had a large family. The people who will share the estate with the Detroit blacksmith, should the report of the inheritance prove true, are, John Rousseau, of Albion; Peter Rousseau, of Traverse City, and the heirs of Elizabeth Vasaw and Maggie Dolg, of Escanaba, two sisters who are now dead. These are all children of the father's first marriage. There are in addition John Vasaw and three sisters who live at Escanaba, who come into the family by the second marriage of the father, and they, too, will have claims.

If the estate has been left in such shape that all of it will fall to Dennis Rousseau and his brothers and sisters, each should get approximately one million dollars. But, however, the other members of the family look at it, the Detroit man will be satisfied with only a part of that sum.

For twenty-seven years Dennis Rousseau has worked before the forge in the blacksmith shop of Severs & Eadman, at Jefferson street. Clad in his leather apron, with his arms bare, he has pounded iron and smudged his face with the coal every day, winter and summer, all that time. Naturally he is getting pretty tired of it, and release from the servitude by the inheritance of a hundred thousand or so would be just about as welcome as the same result accomplished by a million.

"What are you going to do when you get the money?" Dennis was asked Saturday night.

"Oh, I don't know. I wouldn't know what to do first. No, you bet your life I wouldn't do any more blacksmithing. I've worked all my life, and I'm pretty tired of it. If I do get anything out of this I'll take it easy for the rest of my life."

OUR GOOD LUCK IN GETTING CHATHAM PLANT

Charlotte Chronicle.
Winston-Salem is to be congratulated in having drawn the Chatham Manufacturing Company, with its capital of $250,000. The Chronicle considers this the most important deal for its piedmont neighbor in years. We could have wished that the Chatham Company had come down toward Charlotte and located in the electric zone, but it is not jealous of Winston-Salem. The opportunities in and around Charlotte will be filled in due time and we can afford to rejoice in every good stroke made by our neighbors. The value of a modern hotel to a town is not to be lightly handled, yet we believe that the Chatham plant will be worth two new hotels to Winston. For in the end it will likely bring the second new hotel to that town, or very greatly aid in bringing of it. The location of the Chatham Company in Winston-Salem means a great impetus to the industrial interests of that town.

Miss Bessie Groer, of Kernersville, was here yesterday afternoon, returning to her home from Spray.
