overable, across the ocean from Atlantic, interrupting her movement, the exchange of wireless communications went on, up to a time when carried over so long that it was evident that has come down six long years. "After six years,

This message came from across the water to the millionaire's girl after six years for her mother had been rewarded and repaid when she was prosecuted for the honor of which was at last successful. The girl is a daughter of an American millionaire and for six years has waited for the return of her lover who sent her to seek his fortune when her parent forbade his attentions and left him because he believed the man to be a mere fortune-hunter. Alfred Becker, former officer in the German army, is the man. Since she parted from him in New York in 1900 the girl has heard no word from him. But she has remained faithful to him and refused other suitors even when receiving apparently authentic information that Becker, disappointed and enraged, had killed himself in China. Until she knew positively of his death she said she would not give him up. Then her parents relented. Becker has been located in Florida. At present he is employed as manager for the East Coast Railway.

POSSIBLE TROUBLE WITH JAPAN IS DISCUSSED

(By Publishers' Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—F. M. Hatch, former official representative of Hawaii in Washington, and one of the signers of the treaty which made the Hawaiian Islands a part of this country, believes there would be a fight in the Pacific should the United States and Japan back home in war. One of the first places where trouble would arise, he predicted, would be in Hawaii. Owing to the fact that about 150,000, two-thirds of whom are in the service of Japan's army, are in the islands and only ten thousand Americans there could be little chance of the immediate outbreak of strife there. In his mind he also pictures the threat of Japan swooping down upon the Philippines and our mid-ocean possessions and gobbling them up in an hour. Then would come incursion of San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. For a year or two we should be at a great disadvantage, he says, because of our resources of men and wealth, we should win eventually. Victory would cost the United States billions in money and thousands of lives. "But the time has not come for us with Japan," continued Mr. Hatch. "It will come some day, but not about such disputes as the sandal makers and small statesmen of San Francisco have stirred up."

A letter to relatives in the off states that C. T. Pleasant, who was painfully injured at Groton, W. Va., recently, is able to lie out on crutches.

—Henry Brown Farrow, son of L. Farrow, who has been unable to leave his home, is somewhat improved.

You know that many of those old women are poor, and in your state you know that the people there are not well given by the Democratic party? It makes me angry to hear a Democrat." (Great Applause.)

He pictured in the most pathetic language the life of the Confederate woman during the war. "I would write to you to urge him to come. She would rather see a smile than a frown, and freeze than that cold, biting diabolism across her face. You all know that the poison she used was given by the Democratic party? Who wouldn't be a Democrat?" (Great applause.)

"Oh, I know you Republicans have persecuted Confederates. You penalized deserters, and thus the difference between us and you is a marked treachery and we fidelity."

Asylums.

At this time the governor was carrying his audience with him with his astute humor, particularly in his speech. His audience followed every word with eager interest. "Yes," he said, "we spent your money in other ways, too, took it out of your pockets. We took the poor men and left them in the gutter. That's the way we treated your money. We have taught the world a lot of lies to say paper and gold are the people who get rich quickest, and those who care for the children and old people and the weak. Take the additional cost for hospitals and deaf and dumb institutions and education and the veterans and we never spent but little."

The Tariff.

The speaker then talked of the tariff. He said all taxation forced to impose and inequality and that Washington made some tax on people could tax themselves out. But the speaker paid a tribute to W. J. Bryan which was received with cheers. He said Bryan's idea of the quantitative theory of money had been proved correct by the currency of the Klondyke and the Spanish-American war and the Spanish-American war which caused the nations to lose their money in buying supplies and sending labor.

Rapped Butler.

The ex-governor did not fail to bark Butler. He said that Mary Ann had up the Democratic and Populist parties and what he would do for the Republicans would be a pretty
