INTEREST IN RIFLE PRACTICE INCREASING

(Special to The Sentinel)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The attention directed to the work of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice by President Roosevelt, in the concluding paragraph of his annual message to Congress, has attracted much favorable comment. The Board was created by Congress for the purpose of stimulating interest in rifle practice, first in the National Guard, second among civilians. The first part of its task has been well performed. The militia are practicing with the rifle and receiving no longer before and with the half million dollars now annually set aside exclusively for rifle practice, each State will be provided with ranges and many new State and Federal matches. The attendance on the national matches will be increased, as there will no longer be the excuse of poverty to keep a State from sending a team. Among civilians the work is necessarily slower. Clubs must be organized, ranges found, and weapons procured. The militia will soon be exchanging Keags for Springfield's. However, and there seems to be no reason why Congress should not authorize the War Department to issue them to civilian clubs through the National Rifle Association. Rifle Associations are being organized in almost every State and enthusiasts are forming rifle clubs here and there through these States. The work is progressing nicely, through the National Rifle Association and the Board is drawing nearer its goal. Everwhere the school children have been given instruction in rifle shooting they have become enthusiastic. Some persons seem to think the government proposes to have school children of tender years tramping out to the ranges with guns as large as themselves, to engage in competition with men. Not at all. The proposition is that children in the high schools should receive a certain amount of training, first with a sub-target gun, which requires no ammunition and where there is not a particle of danger, and then with the .22 caliber musket. The training thus given would encourage them to join either the militia or civilian rifle clubs after they leave school. England makes a great point of rifle practice in the schools, as do France and other countries, on the principle that "the boys of today are the men of tomorrow." After all, boys like to shoot with a bow, sling, or gun. How much better that they should be taught so under careful instructors than to go popping cats on the back fence with air guns.

Much complaint is heard from enthusiastic riflemen over the fact that the newspapers and the magazines, as a rule, pay so little attention to rifle practice. It is pointed out that while pages are given to accounts of races, prize fights, football matches, and automobile topics, the winner of a rifle match is fortunate if his name is ever mentioned. These critics should remember that as a rule periodicals treat of what they believe will most interest their readers, and if some of them do not pay much attention to rifle practice it is because they are not generally interested in the subject. But there are nearly four hundred daily papers in the country publishing articles from time to time on this subject. And it is noticeable that as they take up rifle practice they find their readers are interested, and number that a few years ago never published anything on the subject are now running articles regularly, some of them as often as twice a week. Michigan has its own publicity association which supplies short articles twice a month to the Michigan press on what is being done in the State of Michigan for rifle practice. As a result of the devoted efforts of the Michigan rifle clubs are springing up all over the State and the press has been quick to respond. Riflemen have no cause to complain of the general press, for it is largely due to the sympathetic interest of some of the leading journals that interest has increased within the past few years to the extent it has.

The suggestion is often made that to popularize rifle shooting "societies" must be interested. Those advancing this interesting idea forget that "society" interests itself very little in sports in which it does not take an active part. It patronizes racing largely because it owns the tracks and some of the stables. It patronizes golf because it plays the game. The same is true of automobiles and with football. The interest of "society" as the term is used, in rifle practice, will come when civilian clubs become popular, when men bring their wives and daughters to see them shoot. The presence of the ladies made the tournaments of the Middle Ages successful, while the Vestal Virgins occupied the place of honor in the Roman amphitheater. There was a time when the women of England wanted no better sport than archery. If the ladies take up rifle shooting that sport will soon outstrip golf as a popular pastime. Of course this is more or less jesting, but speaking seriously, the American woman rides to the hounds, plays men at golf and tennis and has her own basket ball teams. Many of them hunt and fish as experts. Of course not many would care to shoot with the Krag or Springfield, but it is safe to say that if the civilian clubs which have shooting galleries were to encourage the ladies to shoot with the .22 Winchester, or the Krag

Schnapps Tobacco is Made ENTIRELY from Flue Cured Tobacco Grown in the Piedmont Country.

The Imitation Brands Have Schnapps Quality Only On the Outside Of the Plug

Hundreds of imitation brands are on sale that look like Schnapps tobacco. The outside of the imitation plugs of tobacco is flue cured the same as Schnapps, but the inside is filled with cheap, flimsy, heavily sweetened air cured tobacco. One chew of Schnapps will satisfy tobacco hunger longer than two chews of such tobacco. The color, size and shape of the tags, plugs and packages of certain imitation brands of tobacco have been made so much like Schnapps that they have often been accepted by buyers under the belief that they were getting Schnapps. Sufficient proof has been secured to establish the fact that certain brands are infringements and in violation of the trade mark laws, yet the trade will continue to be imposed upon by these infringers until the suit already entered and now pending to protect Schnapps is decided. A great many of these imitations are claimed to be "just as good" as Schnapps, but there is only one genuine Schnapps. Be sure the letters on the tag, and stamped on the plug under the tag spell S-C-H-N-A-P-P-S and then you have it—the most wholesome tobacco produced, with just enough sweetening to preserve the mild, juicy, stimulating quality of the leaf tobacco. Expert tests prove that this flue cured tobacco, grown in the famous Piedmont region, requires and takes less sweetening than any other and has a wholesome, stimulating, satisfying effect on chewers.

If the tobacco you are chewing don't satisfy you more than the mere habit of expectorating, stop fooling yourself and chew Schnapps tobacco. Schnapps is like the tobacco chewers formerly bought costing from 75c. to $1.00 per pound; Schnapps is sold at 50c. per pound, in 5c. cuts, strictly 10c. and 15c. plugs.
