Winston-Salem, and the session of the session o future, reminescent dreams of "New future, rominescent dreams of New Africa, will no doubt excelle in the minds of its former devotees. So more will the girls frohe around in the charlots, or the nove sit that grancing steeds with difficult, or the old people pretent they are riding blind mules. All this is over now or will soon be lost in the progress of humanity. The colony which spring up on the lot in one night will disappage up on the lot in one night will disappage up on the lot in one night will disappage up on the lot in one night will disappage up on the lot will pear next Wednesday and the lot will be a barren down a barren desert again.

The reason for its downfall is evident to everyone. Patronized by respectable colored people at first, the lot was the scene of much happiness and joy, but finally it became the loafing place of the county road and penitentiary material and it was these that caused the trouble. Another rea-on was that the man tried to stay here too long and those who worked and had money to ride got tired of it and stopped coming, while those who were unemployed hung around all the time, jumping on and off and caus-ing all manner of trouble. When the novelty wore off the working negroes ceased to come but those who were tile formed the bulk of the spectators toward the last and these are responsible for the downfall. All the joy and happiness of the place departed some time ago and was superseded by fanatical chaos. Yes it is gone and the policemen are uttering thanks.
