What Are the Greatest Songs?

The New York Herald recently commented on the question, "What are the Greatest Songs"—songs that have stirred the human heart, songs whose rhyme and melody are for all time? Many views were advanced by its various readers but by almost unanimous consent the following were the songs that were entitled to that distinction and voted to an exalted position in the "Hall of Fame": "The Star Spangled Banner," "The Marseillaise," "Die Wacht Am Rhein," "Song of the Evening Star" from Tannhauser; "The Lost Chord," "The Meistersinger," "Old Black Joe," "Misericorde" from "H Trovatore," "God Save the Queen," and "Dixie." These immortal melodies, together with many of the patriotic national anthems and the newest ballads, songs, and the sweet old time songs of the south will be a feature of the bandy Dixie Minstrel performance announced for Tuesday night, March 3.

Adelaide Thursday, March 10.

The name of Adelaide Thurston is known, and favorably so, in every section in the United States. The rapid rise of this clever artist in her chosen profession has been the cause of more than passing comment among her world of admirers. It was in Kansas City where she spoke her first lines upon any stage. As young and inexperienced as she was, those who had the pleasure of seeing her could not well refrain from growing enthusiastic in her behalf, and predicting for her a future that would attract the attention of the theatre-going public throughout the country.

Whatever may have been the opinion of the public regarding Miss Thurston, as a young girl, it would seem that she has accomplished all and even more than her greatest admirers in her girlhood days had reason to anticipate.

From the very beginning her progress seemed not only rapid, but sure. It was while appearing in a small company, and playing a small part as well that Charles Frohman, who happened to be in the theatre on the occasion, recognized the extraordinary ability of this young girl and immediately engaged her for "The Little Minister" to play "Lady Babbie" in that famous piece, contemporaneous with Maude Adams.

The tremendous impression and her youth and beauty and her popularity with the theatre goers throughout the entire country, laid the foundation of her independent starting career. She was introduced to the public as a star in the city of Norfolk, Virginia. The play was "Sweet Clover" and her impersonation of Louis Hulemb received commendation of the highest order. At "Cosy Corners" furnished the material for her second season, in which she displayed ever-increasing ability as Avis Merrill. The third year of Miss Thurston's starring the play was "Polly Primrose." Her success in this play advanced this clever actress several rounds up the ladder of fame, and which gained for her the hearty endorsement not alone from the public in general, but also from the best dramatic writers in the United States which caused her manager to repeat the play for two seasons. The following season Miss Thurston appeared with her usual success in W. A. Tremayne's and Irving D. Hall's English comedy "The Triumph of Betty." Last season Miss Thurston was seen in Pauline Phelps and Marlon Short "The Girl From Out Yonder," which afforded her the greatest scope for her talents she has ever had, as it called for many of the qualities Miss Thurston displayed in her portrayal of "Lady Babbie" in "The Little Minister."

So great has been the demands for Miss Thurston's return in "The Girl From Out Yonder," her manager, Francis X. Hope, decided to have her appear again this season in the same play which is described as a heart-story, pure and sweet, true and strong, convincing and entertaining. It is in short, all things that are desirable for a play.

This performance will be given at the Elks Auditorium Tuesday night, March 10.

Col. Fries' Instructive Lecture on Egypt

The illustrated lecture on Egypt by Col. F. H. Fries, at Alumnae Memorial Hall last evening, was attended by a large and appreciative audience.

The stereopticon views used were made from photographs taken by Col. Fries, while on his recent tour through the Old World. The evening was made more interesting by the rendition of several songs on the graphophone which were recorded in Egypt, the airs of which were weird and peculiar.

As the lecturer proceeded one could almost imagine himself in that country of old ruins, minarets, pyramids and glorious sunsets, so excellent were the pictures and so comprehensive the lecture.

Taft to Speak in Buffalo.

It is expected that many thousands will join in the demonstrations of welcome upon the secretary's arrival.

Little Girl's Sketch of Geo. Washington

The following excellent sketch of Washington was the work of Hattie Ferguson, a girl in the fifth grade at the North Winston school, and was read by her in a very pretty program rendered by that grade yesterday afternoon:

George Washington was born in the 22nd day of February, 1732. He went to what was called "an old field school," to a man named Mr. Hobby.

George loved a soldier's life and many were the bloodless battles fought in the old field with his schoolmates, and in these young George was captain.

It is said that he was so just that his schoolmates would bring their quarrels for him to settle.

When he was eleven years old his father died, but his mother took pains to bring him up with manly ideas.

He now went to school to a Mr. Williams, from whom he learned reading, writing and arithmetic, and a little bookkeeping and surveying. He went to school until he was sixteen years old.

Washington must have studied his books of surveying very carefully, for when he was yet a boy he was sent to survey some of the wild lands of Lord Fairfax.

A war between the French and English closed in 1763. In this Washington became the hero of the people.

He married Mrs. Martha Custis, a widow, and lived quietly at Mt. Vernon for many years. He did not gain many great victories, but he was a good general and brought us through the Revolution. When the war closed he went home, as he said, "a private citizen on the banks of the Potomac." But the nation he and others had fought so hard to set free seemed to fall into thirteen pieces. So a convention was called in 1787, which should bind the states together under the rule of a president and congress. George Washington was elected president by almost all the votes cast.

There were no railroads nor telegraphs, so a messenger was sent to tell Washington that he had been chosen the first president of the United States.

On the 30th of April, 1789, he took the oath of office in the presence of a great throng of people. He was again elected president in 1792. He refused to be elected a third time. He left the presidency in 1797, after publishing a farewell address to the country.

He died at Mount Vernon in 1799.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Value of Protective Laws.

The Equitable is subject to the Insurance Laws of the State of New York, and its policy holders enjoy the protection of these laws.

Governor Hughes, who has given much thought to the subject of Life Insurance, said in his first message to the legislature:

"At the last session several statutes were passed with the object of furnishing more sure protection to the policy holders. . . . Many of the provisions became effective on January 1, 1907. These statutes were enacted after very careful consideration."

He had previously said, "I would rather take insurance in a New York company, compelled to do business under those restrictions than in any company not so restricted; and I believe that will be the sentiment of the people of the United States."

Moral: Insure in the Equitable Life.
