WILKESBORO, N. C.

The men from the "fresh-water colleges" seem to be able to row in salt water pretty well, too.

The postoffice at Mount Vernon, N. Y., will hereafter be closed on Sundays. This is the result of a campaign conducted by the Christian Endeavorers, who got up great petitions and forwarded them to the Postmaster-

According to recent statistics published by the Government at Berne there are 509,000 men in Switzerland liable to military service. Of this number 233,000 are incorporated in the active service, and 276,000 kept on the rolls in case of emergency.

The only opposing candidate to the re-election of President Diaz, of Mexico, obtained a piano the other day on the instalment plan, and had it forthwith moved to a pawn shop. The money ($300) raised on the instrument is said to have been expended for campaign purposes.

There are twenty-six cremation associations in active operation in the United States. The eldest was organized in Washington, Penn., in 1876, and the two newest are found at New Haven, Conn., and Elizabeth, N. J. (1894). The number of incinerations reported is 3670. The number incinerated in Europe from 1876 to 1893 was 19,700. The membership of the American associations is about 8000, and the adherents of the method number about 100,000.

with such splendid ceremonies, has now been in use over a year. The maritime trade has not availed itself of the shortened passage nearly as much, thus far, as it was supposed it would, and in consequence of the fact the German Government has determined to reduce the tolls. The relative receipts from tolls are said to have fallen off considerably since last October, even with the winter season excepted. Nearly all the vessels passing through the canal are German, but there are also some Danish, Dutch and Swedish, a very few English and a Russian and a Brazilian ship of war.

The Atlanta Constitution exclaims: "The eyes of the world are fixed admiringly upon the flag of Cuba. In America the prayers of seventy millions of people are with her and the heart of the country beats as the heart of one man. Though Cuba has a population of less than one-half of that of the United States in 1776, Spain has sent over to the island twice as many troops as England sent over to conquer America. The statement throws light upon the situation and shows that the Cubans are making one of the most heroic fights this world has ever known. Such heroism as this is bound to success."

Queer methods are occasionally adopted in London to raise money for the hospitals. The Lancet says that on a recent Sunday in a certain part of London there was a street procession organized in aid of a hospital. In addition to the usual bands and banners of friendly societies which accompany these processions, there were tradesmen's carts, decorated with flowers and vegetables, the name of the owner of the vehicle being, of course, conspicuously visible. But the principal "attraction" was a man on what was supposed to be a sickbed, and attended by two nurses, one of whom was a qualified nurse and the other a person masquerading in a nurse's costume.

Philadelphia has opened twelve publie school-yards as playgrounds for children in the more densely populated parts of the city, announces the New York Post. At each of them is conducked a morning kindergarten, under the direction of public school teachers, and, in addition, each playground is supplied with toys and games for the amusement of the younger as well as the older boys and girls. A sand heap, with spades and buckets, is placed in each yard, and tents or awnings are fitted up in those yards not having sufficient shade to protect the children from the sun. The cost of fitting each yard with the articles needed for the games was about $15. There are seats for mothers bringing their babies, and chairs and tables for the kindergartens. The janitors, with authority increased by appointment as special policemen, have the care of the toys and games and exercise a general superintendence over the children. Like provision was made for the children last summer and with very satisfactory results.

AQUARELLE,

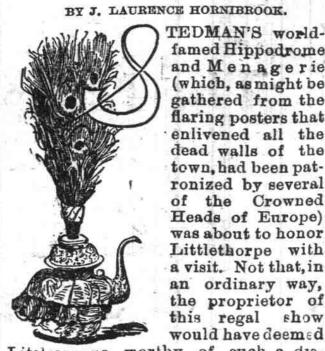

A moorland margin of the sea With gypsy roses overrun; Above it all a blue sky free, Where walks the golden sun.

Gray rocks and dunes of silver sand: Beyond-one sail of purple shows; And drowsily across the land The pine's fresh fragrance blows.

Here is the paradise of rest, Of peace the pinnacle supreme: Lie down upon the earth's warm breast And yield you to her dream! -Frank D. Sherman, in Harper's Weekly.

THE BLACK PANTHER.

BY J. LAURENCE HORNIBROOK.

enlivened all the last sixpence. dead walls of the this regal show

Littletnorpe worthy of such a dis- of that beauty, eh?" tinction; but, as he took care to give dress rehearsals, and affording the in- mate terms. habitants a treat of a life-time, he deplayed a due appreciation of his laud- lay. able intentions, and prepared to accord to show a vociferous welcome.

By ten o'clock two enormous tents, one circular, the other oblong, were him with my eye. Besides," he went of her own for being present. All the to the left you see a specimen of the struggling to maintain their upright on, vehemently, "if he cuts up rough, position in the face of a pretty stiff I could strangle the brute before he breeze, which threatened every mo. had time to get his claws into me. The Kiel Canal, which was opened | ment to level them to the ground. Oh, no; it isn't the panther I mind; | much at first-thought it was only in search of its prey. Signor Farrelli Strings of horses, spotted and speckled | but-" like the patriarch Jacob's kine, were led down to the river, followed by an enthusiastic and admiring crowd. The members of the equestrian troupe wandered through the town in search of breakfast; and, judging by the if compelled to confide in him. "I'll roar after roar that came from the zoological section of the show, an erstwhite king of the forest was clamouring loudly for his.

The oblong tent was set apart for the menagerie. Inside, the close, fetid atmosphere seemed to have a very drowsy effect upon the solitary broad fringe of light around the encustodian, for he lay stretched face downwards on a pile of straw in the row of intent, eager faces in the backcorner, his head pillowed upon his ground. The two men turned aside arms. The great breadth of back, the and wandered off into the darkness. girt and sinewy hardness of his power- When they came to the low wall tul limbs, proclaimed him to be a veritable Hercules. He was none other Farrelli stood still and listened. Then, than the renowned and much-advertised lion-tamer, Signor Petro Farrelli, otherwise, plain Peter Farrell.

At the further end of the tent stood a long cage, capable of being divided into two compartments by means of a sliding barrier. It contained the lions. Gaunt, skinny, hungry-looking brutes they were, the bones sticking out sharply through their tawny hides. From end to end of the cage they moped in a ceaseless, monotonous tramp, like restless spirits that know no peace. Every minute or so one of them would rear up his head suddenly and glare through the bars, as if contemplating an imaginary crowd, and then resume his weary round.

them as to the extent of ground he to fall foul of that man Vallard. It could cover, but the brown specimen was about a girl. I had noticed her sat upon his haunches looking decid- hanging around the circus for two or it somehow. I sat down in the tent eyes were withdrawn from his enemy. edly mournful and out of sorts. Sig- three days-wanted to become rider, nor Farelli slept through it all. occasional growl or a snarl did not to strike up an acquaintance with her. appear to disturb the quietude of his She told me her name was Florence slumber. But when the two hyenas Mayhew, and bit by bit it came out became engaged in a lively discussion over the thigh-bone of a horse, he raised his massive head and glowed around the tent with sleepy eyes. With a sudden twist of the body he rolled over on his back, and for some minutes lay there contemplating the fluttering canvas overhead. Then he through slums and alleys, until I got indulged in a mighty yawn, shook down close to the river. himself and sat upright. In a listless sort of way he plucked a straw from the heap and began toying with it indolently. His manner was thoughtful and preoccupied; it almost seemed as if he had something on his mind—something, perhaps, which had been suggested to him in his sleep. Having given the matter, whatever it was, five minutes' grave consideracious of the whole species. Farrelli Ireland. had been trying his hand at taming the brute; but as yet, though his reckless daring often prompted him to foolhardy feats, he had never ventured into the cage for more than a second or two at a time.

Striding up and down, with the tealthy, gliding motion of a cat, the fierce beast kept its head persistently turned towards the man, and regarded him with savage, blinking eyes. With his face close to the bars, Farrelli watched every movement of the animal, as if each had a significance which he alone understood. Then he seemed to drop back into a reverie; and in this fit of abstraction he commenced striking idly at the panther much how I went, when I came upon with the straw in his hand.

An hour or so later the tent was densely packed from end to end. sprang out upon me with a knife in it out with her, and not give her the When Farrelli appeared on the scene, his hand. It was Vallard. He made satisfaction of knowing that she had the hush of swe fell upon the specta- nick of time, and let him have a heavy | silent, deadly struggle is still going He proceeded to lash the cowed right hander in return. brutes round and round the cage, "He dropped the knife and reeled "a lion hunt," in which there was a him, down he went into the river! tremendous flashing and banging of

of the beasts to get into the corners. When it was all over, and the tamer them that, among other marvelous attractions, they would witness an ex- rushing and gurgling of the water. traordinary and unique feat of daring on the part of the celebrated Signor went home considerably sobered. The upon the scene, his tight fitting cos-Petro Farrelli. He worked upon their rest of that night I sat in my room tume displaying to advantage his masand Menagerie curiosity, there was scarcely a man or thinking the matter out. I came to sive chest and the great swelling mus-(which, as might be woman in the assembly who did not the conclusion there was nothing to cles of his powerful limbs. gathered from the resolve to avail themselves of the op- be gained by making a fuss over it, flaring posters that portunity, even if it cost them their and determined to keep my own coun- through the crowd in front;

In the interval, after the animals town, had been pat- had been fed, Farrelli wandered up ronized by several into the deserted tent, and again approached the cage of the black pan- happened to meet her: she stopped were getting good value for their Heads of Europe) ther. Somehow, it seemed as if an and looked at me - and upon my word, money. The lashing and scramble was about to honor irresistible impulse drew him to that Mark, I never got a worse look from commenced; the lions growled and Littlethorpe with spot. It was growing dark now, and any of these savage brutes over there. a visit. Not that, in | in the gloom he could just distinguish | I believe she partly guessed that I had an ordinary way, the red glare of the creature's eyes a hand in her lover's disappearance. the proprietor of a; it crouched down in a corner.

would have deemed some one behind him. "Taking stock got out of the mess uncommonly well.

out, it was a convenient halting-place. found himself face to face with the the affair in the papers, and the whole between two important centres. There- ring master, Mark Radford, the only thing seemed to have blown over fore, with the triple object of resting member of the whole troupe with quietly. his horses, holding a couple of full- whom he was upon any sort of inti-cided upon a one-day's sojourn. On you?" continued Radford, pointing to son I laid eyes on was Florence May- with a hand on each hip, proceeded to their part, the public in general dis- the dark recess in which the panther hew. What on earth brought her announce:

> "Afraid? No!" returned Petro, contemptuously. "I've got the mastery over him already; I can quell her looks she had some special reason in Europe or America. In the cage

"But what?" "I'm afraid of that woman?"

"What woman?" "Come outside, Mark," said Farrelli, taking his friend by the arm as tell you the whole story right off, and then you can judge whether I have cause to feel a bit uneasy about the panther."

They strolled out of the tent, arm in arm. Two or three flaring naphtha lamps, suspended from poles, threw a trance, glimmering faintly upon a ground. The two men turned aside which bounded the market place, as if assured that they were alone, he seated himself upon the edge of the wall, and commenced his story.

"You remember that fellow Vallard, Mark?" he said, with a serious- for. ness that convinced the other there was some startling disclosure coming. "Should think I do," replied Radford; "Rowdy' Vallard, we used to call him. A good bare-back rider, but a desperately cantankerous, quarrelsome sort of fellow. He left us very suddenly, too; and no one seemed to know what became of him." "Yes," muttered Farrelli, "that's Well," he went on, sternly. "you'll hear now what befell him. When we were running the show up The Polar bear seemed to vie with in York last winter, I had the ill-luck that she had a sweetheart in the show. her to say which of us it was.

"One night, when the performance was over, I set out for a quiet ramble through the streets. I wandered on "It was a dismal and deserted spot. As I looked around I saw a man and a woman ahead. I knew at once who they were-Vallard and Florence Mayhew. Her secret was now out; but I couldn't him. It is a ticklish business, no faces, as if fascinated by that deadly less "grown-ups." help wondering what she saw in that matter what people may say. Your encounter. Two attendants came runbrute to attract her.

"They seemed to be wrangling about something. Suddenly they stopped short, as if to argue the matter out. tion, he dismissed it with an impatient While I stood watching them I saw single instant you are done for! And batants; the beast, dazed and half "Pshaw!" and sprang to his feet. Vallard raise his hand to strike the that is what the woman was trying to strangled by that awful grip, was Lounging across the tent, he went up girl. My blood boiled, Mark; the do!" and stood before a cage which con- next second I was at his side and flung tained the latest addition to the menag- him on the flat of his back in the mud. by the arm, and the two began pacing out of the cage. erie. It was a black panther, a full- He got up and went for me furiously. | slowly up and down. grown specimen of this somewhat rare We had a stand-up fight; and-well, variety, known to be the most fero- he came off 'second best,' as we say in

"When it was all over I turned towards the girl, half expecting she would seeking to revenge herself upon me: throw herself into my arms or something of that sort. She gave me a look-you should have seen it, Markand flew at me like a tigress. Good heavens! I little guessed what a demon was in that woman! She screamed with passion: she tore at me savagely, and shouted that I had killed her sweetheart. I shook her off, and left them to square matters up between themselves.

"I took a smart turn of a mile or two along by the river, for I felt a bit ruffled, and wanted to walk it off. I was coming back slowly, not minding a huge pile of timber stacked up on the bank. Just as I passed, a man made them leap through hoops of fire back as if half stunned. His heel and perform other surprising feats, caught in a stray log; he tried hard all of which elicited shouts of applause to keep his feet, clawing the air with from the multitude. The display his hands as his body swayed out over wound up with what was designated the brink. Then, before I could reach

"I rushed to the side and peered pistols, and a wild skurry on the part over. He must have gone to the bottom like a stone, or else the current whipped him away out of sight, for I the brown bear devoured buns with had backed out of the cage, the man- never set eyes on him again. I tore befitting solemnity. ager mounted the steps to address the up and down the bank, shouting for crowd. He extended a cordial invita. help, but there wasn't a soul within was a sudden lull, the crowd began to tion to all present to attend the per- hearing. I stood still to listen for a sway and surge forward towards the formance that evening, promising cry from the drowning man. The only rope which was stretched across the sound that reached my ears was the further end of the tent. All eyes were up at the show, and began to make in- greeted with a roar that shook the quiries about Vallard. One evening I | tent, and made the spectators feel they

"Shortly after that we went on tour, "Halloa! Signor Petro," cried and I was beginning to think I had I never heard of Vallard's body being antly from the cage. Farrelli turned round sharply, and recovered; there was no mention of "One night-it was at Huddersfield, I remember-when I went into the and admiration for months afterwards. "You're not afraid of him, are tent, ready for my turn, the first perthere, I wondered? She was standing into their heads, you know, Mark.

"But the very next night she was there again, watching me like that black panther did a while ago. The strange part of it was, she seemed performance with the lions was over. I couldn't for the life of me n.ake out what she was up to; it worried me; and, to tell the truth, Mark, I didn't altogether like the look of it.

"We moved on to another town. performance, went through the same the cage. part, and disappeared. Next day the

"I was getting to dread that girl, the tail flapping against the floor. because I know she had a grudge against me; and women generally and looked on with bated breath. It have a queer way of revenging them- almost seemed as if a sound-a motion selves. What she was driving at, what her motive was in following me about from town to town, was a constant worry to me. To be haunted in this tion might cause it to snap. fashion, without having the faintest out. Bit by bit I got at the truth. I into the air! understood the meaning of it all now; it in this cold-blooded fashion."

"What was it?" demanded Radford, with an eagerness which showed a deep interest in Farrelli's singular

"Just this: I needn't tell you that when a man steps in among the lions he requires to have all his wits about towards the ropes with white, agitated its observance to be omitted by carecage at the same time, watching every into the cage, and rained blow after twist and turn of the brutes. If your | blow upon the panther's head. They attention should be drawn off for a succeeded in separating the com-

"If you had known her, Mark," he went on, thoughtfully, "you wouldn't wonder at her doing a thing of this all she had to do was to watch and wait. She must have felt that the very fact of keeping her eyes steadily fixed upon me night after night was bound to take effect sooner or later. And she was right. More than once I caught myself on the very point of looking round at her. I had to fight against the impu'se; it was dragging at me from the moment I entered the cage—and every night it seemed to be growing stronger.'

"What did you do to get rid of her?" "Nothing. At first, in a sudden burst of rage, I made up my mind to wait for her outside the tent the next evening, and strangle her on the spot. Then something prompted me to fight on between that woman and myself. How it will end, God only knows."

The spacious tent was crammed to its utmost extent. The dromedary camel came in for a good deal of attention, and the wily elephant fared sumptuously upon biscuits and cakes. The greedy little eyes of the monkeys gleamed with delight at the many hands stretched out with nuts, while

In the midst of the merriment there turned expectantly in the direction of "I gave up the search at last, and the lions. Signor Farrelli appeared

He shot a keen, searching glance and then, with a jaunty air. "A day or two later the girl turned stepped briskly into the cage. He was sulked, but Farrelli drove them round with his whip, and sent toem backwards and forwards through the hoops. The burning of red lights and flashing of firearms followed, at the conclusion of which the tamer emerged triumph-

> The event of the evening was now about to take place. The spectators were prepared for something with a strong spice of danger in it; something that could be talked over with wonder

The manager mounted a stool, and

"Ladies and gentlemen, Signor Farin the front row, just like an ordinary | relli will now perform a feat of daring spectator, but it was easy to see by hitherto unattempted by any tamer time I was in the case with the lions I fierce black panther, or jaguar, an felt that those dark eyes of hers were animal which, in its native state, roams glued upon me. I didn't mind it the tangled forests of South America some strange whim on her part, for will enter the panther's cage in your women sometimes take queer fancies presence, and thereby demonstrate the dominion which man is capable of exercising over the most ferocious of the brute creation."

The assembly cheered; Signor Farrelli bowed. He whispered a few anxious to avoid me the moment my words to the manager, and moved away towards the cage. The panther was prowling up and down, watching the crowd with a sort of wondering interest. As Farrelli approached, the beast paused in the midst of a stride and glared at him defiantly. The tam-Well, I was done with the girl now, at | er mounted the steps fearlessly, the any rate, I told myself. Not a bit of spring lock of the wicket clicked and it! She turned up at the evening the next second he had slipped into

With a savage growl the panther show was at Stalybridge; and Florence | whisked round and crouched against Mayhew was there, too. Night after the opposite wall. At one side stood night, no matter where we went, she | the man, erect, motionless, undauntcame and stood in front of the lions' ed, in the full consciousness of his cage, never addressing a word to any. mighty strength and indomitable will: one, but watching me through the at the other the infuriated beast cowbars as if that was all she had to live ered, its body quivering with rage, the for.

The spectators kept perfectly still, -would break the spell which held man and beast apart. The tension was so great that even a stifled exclama-

Suddenly there was a slight movenotion of what it meant, is bound to ment in the center of the crowd, and tell upon you in the long run. I was a woman pushed her way to the front. completely in the dark; that was the Those who were closest to the cage saw a strange look appear at that instant "When this sort of thing had been upon Farrelli's face; he grew deathly going on regularly week after week, I pale; his features twitched convulfelt that I must get at the bottom of sively, and for one-half second his one night after the performance was It was enough! The spell was broken: or something of the kind. I managed over, determined to puzzle the matter with a terrific roar the panther shot

Farrelli saw it coming; saw the I saw what that she-devil was up to. great jaws extended, and the gleam of Good heavens! Mark, it gave me a the fierce white teeth. On the spur But for the life of me, though I kept | creeky sort of feeling in spite of my. of the moment he trust his left nagging at her about it, I couldn't get | self. No one but a woman could have | hand into the the gaping mouth, while hit upon such an extraordinary way of | with his right he gripped the brute by gratifying her malace, and set about the throat. The panther struck him full on the chest, the savage claws were dug into his flesh; then, with a crash, man and beast went down, and rolled together on the floor.

A shudder ran through the horrified crowd; the women screamed and fainted; the men pressed forward eves must be in each corner of the ning up with heavy iron bars, sprang dragon," and the "bobbing for apdriven back into a corner while the He got off the wall, took his friend man rose from the floor and staggered And there are the many charms and

That Farrelli had come in for a severe mauling was only too evident. His clothes were torn into shreds, his mangled arm hung by his side, the kind. You see, it was an easy way of blood flowed freely from the numerous gashes in his chest; but, standing erect, he faced the crowd with a fierce and determined aspect. His angry eyes swept through the swaying throng, flitting from one white face to the other as if in search of that relentless enemy of his.

But the woman was gone. From that hour she passed out of his life, never to trouble him again. When he failed to discover her in the crowd, his head suddenly drooped, and he leaned heavily upon his friend Radford, who had hastened to his assistance.

"Well, Mark," he whispered, grimly, as he limped away, "she has had her revenge, you see. We are quits now; and-I forgive her!'-Strand Magazine.

Double flowers are generally the rearmed with his short whip, and a savage blow at me, but I managed got the better of me in anyway. I sult of cultivation, and always an abmarched boldly up to the lions' den, to twist myself out of the way in the have stuck to that ever since; and this normal growth.

Drug Store.

Berry Bros.

Wilkesboro, N. C.

Keep on hand a full line of Fresh Drugs, Medicines, Oils, Paints, Varnishes and Everything kept in a First-Class Drug Store.

Prescriptions

Carefully

Compounded

Store in the Old Stere Johnson Building, just opposite the Court

Sure to Call and See Them

-DEALER IN-

DRUGS,

MEDICENES, PATENT

TOBACCO, CIGARS, Cigarettes, Fancy and

Prescriptions promptly and accurately filled. Situated in the Brick Hotel Building.

Toilet Soaps, etc., etc.

LIVERY & FEED STABLES, A. C. WELLBORN, PROP.

Situated on Main Street, east of the Court House. Good horses and new vehicles of all kinds roady for the accommodation of the traveling public. Horses carefully fed and attended to. Give us a trial and see how we feed.

A .C. WELLBORN, Wilkesboro, - North Carolins.

R. N. HACKETT, Attorneys at Law. WILKESBORO, N. C. Will practice in the State and Federal

Courts. ISAAC C. WELLBORN, Attorney - at - Law,

Wilkesboro, N. C. Will practice in all the courts. Dealer in real estate. Prompt attention paid to collection of claims. H. L. GREENS.

T. B. FINLEY.

FINLEY & GREENE. Attorneys - at - Law, WILKESBORO, N. C.

Will practice in all the courts. Collections a specialty. Real estate sold on Hallowe'en.

Hallowe'en is a festival that should be especially honored by young people. There are so many amusing and good-natured tricks, and so many innocent bits of "white magic" appropriate to the time, that no selfrespecting youngster should allow

There, for instance, are the "snapples," and the blowing out of a candle hung at the end of a stick suspended on a twisted string and balanced by an apple so contrived as to deal a smart blow upon the cheek of the too lingering candle-blower. contrivances that, once consulted in honest faith by rustic lovers, are now the pastime of boys and girls during an autumn evening.

On Time

The President of an accident insurance company, strictly in the line of advertising his business, has been telling a wonderful story, which he locates in Brooklyn, where numerous trolley accidents occur. He says: " Some time ago a large policy holder in my company was run over by a trolley car, and his right leg painfully crushed. He remained conscious after the shock for three minutes. during which time he pulled out his watch and called the attention of the crowd to the fact that it was just fifteen minutes to 12 o'clock. His policy expired at noon, and his foresight was rewarded by the immediate payment of his weekly indemnity without controversy or litigation. The man was a one-time winner. He called time before death knocked him out.