The Dry Weather Hurts Tobacco Crop

The dry weather this spring has certainly played havoc with the 1911 crop of tobacco, not only in this immediate section, but throughout the country. From Kentucky, Virginia, South Carolina and eastern North Carolina come the reports of poor outlook for the crop and even with the most favorable seasons from now on the crop will fall away behind the average both in pounds and quality.

Editors in The Mountains

The editors captured Lenoir and Lenoir captured the Editors. And it was a jolly party of North Carolina pencil pushers and their wives and daughters that took the trip from Lenoir to Blowing Rock, Boone, Linville City and Edgemont. All the beautiful mountain scenery, the land of the laurels, rhododendrons, groves etc. At Boone the editors were given luncheon on the campus of the Appalachian Training School. We were also tendered a reception at the Watana Inn, Blowing Rock, where a table was set on the lawn and lighted by Japanese lanterns.
On the way to Linville City, a party composed of Editors Martin, of Lenoir, Beasley of Monroe, Osborne of Plymouth, Huggins of Marshville, Stephenson of Charlotte, Wiggins of Maxton, London of Siler City, Dr. Potrat, President of Wake Forest College, and myself, stopped and climbed Grandfather Mountain, which stands out over hill and dale in majestic power 5,964 feet above sea level. From here could be seen Blowing Rock 20 miles away and many other small towns in a radius of 15 to 20 miles around, and through strong glasses could be seen the towering tip of Mt. Mitchell.
On Saturday morning, July 1st, the thermometer registered 55 at Linville. Linville City is a beautiful place, surrounded by mountains, through which go beautiful paths leading out from Issella Inn. Here it was, on a lake nearby, that I tried my luck for the first time at trout fishing. Dr. Potrat and Mr. Beasley rowed the boat and I done the fishing, but you'll have to come around to the office to find out what kind of luck I had.
On Saturday morning we started out over the turnpike down the mountain to Edgemont 17 miles distant, where, upon our arrival, refreshments were served, then we boarded a train on the C. & N. W road for our homes, with this thought: "Long live those good mountain people."

Prof. Martin Appointed.

The County Board of Education has appointed Prof. W. D. Martin, of East Bend, as County Superintendent of Public Instruction, as successor to Prof. C. H. Johnson, whose term expired July 6.
Prof. Martin has been identified with the educational interests of Yadkin county for several years.
Dr. Lucy H. Brown, the only colored woman doctor in the State, died Monday at Biddle University, Charlotte. She was the wife of one of the professors Bidale.
A nation wide movement to fight the wearing of high-heel shoes, is the plan of Judge Howard of the supreme court of New York. What difference does it make to him if others wear high-heels, low heel, or no heel at all, so long as it does not injure one's health or morals. Some people just can't let other folks business alone.

The Musical Normal Begins Next Sunday

The Normal School of Vocal Music will open here next Monday, July 17, and will be taught by Prof. W. H. Rnebush, of Dayton, Va., who is known throughout the South as a master in his profession.
The course of study will include instruction in the following branches: Theoretical Principals of Music, Voice Culture, Harmony Notation, Sight Singing and Choir practice. A part of each service will be devoted to Social Singing.
The term will last for two weeks and will open Sunday, July 16, with a preliminary Song Service at the Methodist Church; where the school will be taught.
Tuition for the term will be from $2 down below $1. Sunday School teachers, as well as the teachers of Free Schools should attend this musical normal, as it will be only a short time before vocal music will be taught in the Public Schools.
The people of Yadkinville are preparing to give the attending visitors a golden time while here. Those who do not have relatives or friends to stop with while here, see W. E. Rutledge, who will have boarding places arranged for them.
