Early Cultivation of Crops

In addition to what has already been said about the use of weeders and harrows in pulverizing freshly plowed soil to make a fine, mellow seed bed, we desire to speak of their efficiency and economy in the early cultivation of farm crops. At this busy stage of farm work, any implement that will help get over the fields rapidly and successfully do the work, is considered a valuable addition to farm assets. This is especially true where laborers are scarce and high priced, because very often a good machine, a pair of horses and a capable man to drive will cultivate from three to six times as much land in a day as a man without such implements. Furthermore, cultivation done just when it needs to be done is worth several times as much as delayed cultivation, so the matter is one of rapidity, efficiency and finally one of profit and success.

In using weeders and harrows it is not necessary to wait for the young plants to show above ground before running the implements. The condition of the soil and not the growth of young plants should be the main consideration. If conditions warrant it, run the implements before the planted seeds germinate, and continue for from three to five times or until the crop is large enough to be injured by the process. Perhaps the best advice to be given concerning these implements is this: Get busy with them early after rains. There is not much to be gained by their use after a crust is formed and a carpet of green grass is showing over the fields. Some of the grass will be rooted up but the balance will be cultivated so that it grows all the faster.

These implements are not intended to break land with. If rocks, chunks or other weights have to be used on them to make them do the work properly, this shows that the farmer did not properly break his land, or that he has waited too long after a rain to use these implements. If the soil becomes very compact and seems to need loosening to a depth of from two to three inches, then use some form of cultivator that will go deeper than the implements under consideration. However caution should be observed here and these heavier cultivators should not be used after the corn is ten to twelve inches high. Remember that the roots of these crops grow outward into the soil three or four times as fast as the stalks grow upward. There are only a few cases in which root pruning not retard the growth of crops. Roots have a function to perform. If broken they cannot do the work they are intended to do.

When a good rain or two have fallen start the weeders or harrows just as soon as the soil is firm enough to hold up the weight of a horse without miring. To delay is to lose an opportunity to kill grass and weeds before they have gotten a good hold in the soil.

Dislodging them while they are germinating destroys them. This stirring helps to make the surface warmer because the loose mulch on top retards evaporation. Evaporation cools the surface (Prove this by wetting the hands but covering one with cloth or other medium. The exposed hand will soon be much cooler than the other). We thus, also, save moisture which we are almost sure to need during the dry, hot growing period of the crop. It is usually the grass that comes up with the crop that gives most trouble and expense to get out. If the implements named are run properly and at the opportune time the "fingers or spikes work in among or around the young plants, thus destroying grass that would probably have to be gotten out later by expensive hand-hoeing. Save this expense by cultivating eight to ten acres per day with a weeder or light harrow instead of cultivating, as we used to do, one acre per day with a hoe or 2 to 3 acres per day with a plow that requires from two to four trips per row to do the work.

More About The Logan Matter

The old adage that "a wise man will change his mind, but a fool never" applies with full force to the matter which has been discussed in this paper and a nihilist in the Boonville Herald. The Herald gives the following from pen of J. C. Money, who is being used as a tool by people higher up:

"One of the Pinkerton detectives took a lot of dynamite, nitro-glycerine and electricity and placed it in the big woods for an explosion, and then retired to a safe distance to await results, after the explosion there was a fearful crater left in the earth and many trees were torn up by the roots. One lone black-jack shrouling as it fell: Politics! Politics! Politics!"

"But upon investigation it was found that the explosion had destroyed a large den of thieves and robbers that had been preying upon the county people for years."

No body but a political neurotic and fool would dare make such a statement for an intelligent people to read. If there was a den of thieves and robbers unearthed in Yadkinville why haven't they been prosecuted? The writer has the State of North Carolina behind him to prove his assertion and it is the sworn duty of every citizen to prosecute a wrong wherever it is found and if such things have been carried on in Yadkinville we will lend every effort at our disposal to help bring them to justice for their crimes. Now Mr. Money if you are a law abiding citizen; if you love justice; if you want to prove there is or has been a den of thieves and robbers in this town it is your duty to PROVE IT or forever hereafter hold your tongue. He also says:

"The whole matter in controversy has been carried on for years in darkness. And the saying, 'They loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil,' applies with full force here."

People who have small minds cannot be expected to comprehend great things. To call a man a thief and robber is a much broader statement than the writer imagines. This is a grand insult to every official of Yadkin county since 1904, to every citizen of Yadkinville; and of Yadkin county in darkness! Has not every meeting of the county commissioners been open and public? Every settlement been recorded, etc. We quote again from the same article:

"We respectfully ask the Ripple to tell us if there is any public record containing an account of the statement and payment of the is or was due the county by the said Logan and if there is to publish it in full so that the people may know the facts in the case."

In reply to the above we say emphatically that there is a record containing a settlement and payment of the account the said Logan was due the County. It would cover about one page of the Ripple and we cannot print it but we refer you to the book, page, etc. where you can see for yourself. It can be found in the public records in the Register of Deeds office in the book entitled, "Record of Official Reports" and on pages 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40 and 41. The Register will be glad to show this Record to any one wishing to see it. In the same article he says:

"Again the people ask why the Ripple did not publish the Jan. commissioners report."

We are publishing a newspaper for the people; their interest is always closest to our heart; in every article their consideration is the first; we are opposed to any wrong whatever; if the Comm. Report is the best news we have then that goes in; if we have something better it is left out; in this case something more important was at hand, and we did not know until a month later that the Logan claim had been audited. If we had known it it would have been the same, because the county commissioners had investigated the claim, found it correct, paid it and it is supposed to be correct until it is proven otherwise, if you have any proof to the contrary produce it or shut up.
