The Democrats of Yadkin County held their convention here last Saturday and elected delegates to the State and Congressional conventions. Mr. R. C. Puryear, Chairman called the meeting to order and D. O. Totton was called as temporary chairman and A. J. Martin, both being made permanent on motion of D. M. Reece.

The convention then took up the work of electing delegates to the State convention which meets June 18th, and the following were chosen as delegates:—Knobs, K. M. Tompson, Buck Shoals, A. J. Martin, Deep Creek, J. D. L. Sampson, Liberty D. M. Reece and J. W. Pass; Forbush, C. E. Hartman; East Bend, R. L. Poindexter and R. W. Craft; Fall Creek, D. G. Hobson; Boonville township was not represented.

A resolution was adopted that "any eligible Democrat be elected a delegate to the Congressional convention and all were instructed to vote for the re-nomination of R. N. Page for congressman. The delegates to the State convention were not instructed. Some of them are understood to be for Wilson and some for Underwood all were instructed to vote for Geo. P. Pell for long term corporation commissioner.

The sun may not shine on you to-day, but don't grumble your time will come.

FRUIT PROSPECTS ARE GOOD, SAYS MR. HUTT

The fruit crop in North Carolina is in excellent condition is shown by the following statement made Mr. W. N. Hutt, state horticulturist:

"I have hesitated in giving a report of fruit prospects in North Carolina until I was sure that the mantle of Jack Frost had safely passed beyond the border of the state. At every report of a drop in temperature in the northwest and Mississippi regions the southern fruit growers would wait with bated breath to see if the cold wave would be fierce enough to extend over his protecting barrier of mountains."

"The past winter was unusually severe in the South, and fruit trees were kept in a perfectly dormant condition until much later in spring than is usual for this part of the country. They were not bloom this season until nearly a month later than they were last year. This very much shortened the danger period of possible injury from cold."

Fruit Large Now

"In comparison of reports for the last 30 years, the United States weather bureau has set April 20 as an average date for the last killing frost in in spring for the general fruit region of North Carolina, but occasional cold spells have occurred as late as May 10. This extreme date has now safely been passed at which the fruit can be injured by cold. There has not been a single setback, but everything has been most favorable to a heavy set of fruit. Trees all over the state have bloomed profusely and the 'set' of all kinds of fruit has been exceptionally heavy. There has been no untoward weather since to cause much dropping and the fruit has developed so rapidly that in spite of the late spring it is now about as big as in the average season.

Need of Thinning

"There will be urgent need this year for thinning of peaches and apples all over the state. On May 1, my assistant did some experimentation on Greensboro peaches. Ten days later he worded on Carman and Elberta, and said that at that time the Greensboro still looked so thick that he could scarcely see where he had thinned."

"With the thorough and careful spraying which is now being given by most of our growers, the fruit of North Carolina will be high in quality as well as abundant in quantity this season."

New Orchards

"Many new orchards of improved varieties have been set in North Carolina and are coming into bearing. Much more attention is now being given than formerly to pruning, spraying and general orchard management. At fruit shipping points along the railroad lines lime-sulphur barrels are now more common than kerosene barrels. This has tended to put orchards in good healthy condition, and has made them resistant to insects and fungus diseases. "Our growers are now forming co-operative organizations and fruit exchanges and are preparing to handle their fruit in standard packages in car-load shipments to the best wholesale markets."

Sizemore Still in Jail

As noted in the Ripple some time ago Alvis Sizemore was placed in Jail in default of a $500 peace bond. The prosecutor being Mrs. Lora Mackie. Atty. John Dobson of Rockford took up the case for Sizemore and carried the matter before Judge Daniels who remanded the case back to D. S. Reynolds, Justice of the Peace, for trial. The case was called for Saturday afternoon at two o'clock but was transferred from Mr. Reynolds court to that of Mr. J. C. Miller. It is understood that Sizemore attempted no defense and was again required to give bond, but this time only $200, he being under bond of $500, besides this one.

Sizemore is still in jail.
