William Jennings Bryan Died While He Slept--- Burial to be in Arlington

Great Commoner and Democratic Leader Just Ended Greatest Fight of Life in Scopes Trial.

Dayton, Tenn., July 26.—William Jennings Bryan, known the world over for his eloquence died here this afternoon.

The end came while the great commoner was asleep and was attributed by physicians to apoplexy. He had retired to his room shortly after eating a large dinner to take a short rest. Mrs. Bryan sent the family chauffeur, Jim McCartney, to wake him about 4:30 and it was learned then that he was dead.

Dr. W. F. Thomason and Dr. A. C. Broyles, who examined the body, expressed the opinion Mr. Bryan had been dead between thirty and forty-five minutes before they arrived.

To Rest in Arlington

The body of Mr. Bryan will be carried to Washington where after lying in state it will be consigned to Arlington cemetery to rest among the nations great until called for by a higher spirit, which spirit Mr. Bryan had defended in the last fight of his life, the Dayton trial of Scopes, charged with teaching evolution. Mr. Bryan considered this the greatest fight and had prepared a master speech which he was not permitted to deliver. This speech will be delivered through the press yet.

Mr. Bryan was 65 years old and is survived by an invalid wife, one son W. J. Jr., and two daughters.

Recover Indian Relics at Muscle Shoals

Washington.—The opening of the big Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals during 1925 will blot out a laboratory of science.

Under the direction of Dr. J. Walter Fewkes, chief of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution, Gerrard Fowke, a trained scientific worker, has been exploring Indian mounds at Muscle Shoals that will be covered with water when the big Wilson dam is put into commission. The relics which Mr. Fowke found are being packed up to be sent to the institution for study. Just what Indian tribe they belonged to remains to be determined.

The Tennessee Valley Historical society invited Doctor Fewkes to have the mounds explored and he sent Mr. Fowke to excavate them at the mouth of Town creek, Colbert county, Alabama, two months ago. Doctor Fewkes also made a trip to the point recently and brought back with him to Washington some of the scientific finds. They include copper ornaments, beads and a species of breastplate, showing Doctor Fewkes said, that the Indians to whom they belonged prized that metal highly.

Find Process to Make

Sugar From Artichokes

Washington.—Experts of the Department of Agriculture are studying the results in the extraction of sugar from vegetables heretofore not utilized for that purpose, which they say have evolved a process that may revolutionize the sugar-growing and refining industry.

The new process, discovered in researches by Dr. R. F. Jackson of the bureau of standards, makes possible, they say, the crystallization of sugar extracted from such vegetables as the artichoke and thus its production for the first time in a usable and commercial form. Lack of a process for crystallizing sugar drawn from such plants, it was said, has been the one bar to their utilization for this purpose.

The sugar derived by this process from the artichoke was said to promise the cheapest source for its production. It is one and one-half times as sweet as the sugar taken from cane and the sugar beet. Its production, it was said, promises to be both simpler and cheaper than cane or beet sugar.

"Blue Hole" in Ohio

Has Odd Properties

Castalia springs, or "the Blue Hole," is at the westerly edge of the village of Castalia, about nine miles southwest of Sandusky, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reports. A good-sized subterranean stream suddenly bobs up to the surface, through deep orifices in the limestone rock which underlies the region. As Cold creek it flows swiftly across three miles of Erie county and into Sandusky bay.

The phenomenon is said not to be an unusual one in limestone countries. The "Blue Hole," the spring itself, is a beautiful, crystal-clear, very nearly circular pool, some thirty feet across and quite deep. Constituents of the water are lime, soda, magnesia and iron, and though the pool is extremely cold it never freezes. The stream is not much affected by floods and droughts, and the first grist mill in northwestern Ohio was operated by the creek, close to the spring, in 1810.

Dinkins Reunion

The relatives of A. Dinkins gathered at his home Sunday and held a Dinkins reunion which was attended by a large number of close relatives and friends.

All of Mr. Dinkins' surviving children, which number 16 were present except two. The occasion was also attended by 29 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

In the shade of the big elm trees a table was prepared and loaded with fine eats, a song was sung; followed by prayer after which every one partook of the fine eats which had been prepared for the occasion, which was enjoyed to the fullest extent by all present.

It was a jubilee home coming occasion for the children, which recalled the memory of father, mother and childhood days.

Mr. Dinkins is 65 years of age, a prosperous farmer, County Commissioner, and a man that his community is proud of and his many friends and relatives wish him a much longer and happy life.
