Valuable Business Property To Be Sold In Yadkinville

Main Street Property to be Sold at Auction, Monday, Nov. 2nd. Opens Business Section

On the fourth page of this paper is an advertisement which speaks for itself and which means more to the business interests of Yadkinville than any deal of recent years.

Attorney S. Carter Williams, president of the Southside Realty Co., and Mr. W. R. Weir, manager of the company and Sec. Treas., have secured options on a nice block of business lots in Yadkinville and will offer them to the public at auction on Monday, Nov. 2nd, at one o'clock.

The Zachary property, beginning at the corner of the postoffice and running west on Main street to the Yadkin Cafe, a total of 80 feet will be divided into lots and sold. The lots across the street from Logan Motor Co., including the old Holton store building will be sold at the same time. The Phillips property, facing on the court house square and on the street running West, south of the court house.

This is all valuable business property and means more to Yadkinville than any real estate deal here. It opens up a section for building that has been sought for years without result and only recently many people have come here to go in business without being able to get a place.

The Phillips property, west of the court house, is the property of the Dixie Bond and Mortgage Co., and they have options on the other.

A brass band has been engaged for the sale and the company is arranging for a list of free prizes to be given away at the sale, including a jar of money.

THE HEEDING CALL

It was within the hour, And at the appointed time, When the old church bell in the tower, Began its solem chimes.

Its silent tones were heard, Far away in the hills, And to many a weary heart, Its magic music thrills.

It was heard in the valleys, And also in the plains, It has a splendid message, And to us it will explain.

Its calling us together, To a wonderful little spot, In a little wooden building, And its on a vacant lot.

It was a funny little building, And a queer looking shack, But in this little building, The people they did pack.

Now in this little building, We heard a message read, Of the transfiguration, And the raising of the dead.

It told of gods on trouble, In the book he has given, Of the death upon the cross, And the side that was riven,

He sets up the great example, For his people here on earth, Will you let him share the burden, And believe in his new birth. Will you heed now the calling Of the ever tolling bell, Or will you neglect this duty, And be sent right down to hell.

Oh then my friends what trouble, In that lax that burns with fire, Its an awful dreadful vision, To be clad in this attire.

Friends this is the message, That is being preached today, Of his death upon the cross, And the debt we have to pay.

Will you today solve the problem Of the way that leads to light, Always keep that narrow road, The road that is in the right.

—By C. R. Melton.

TEN CITIES CONTINUE VISITING TEACHERS

Demonstration Aids in Wiping Out Delinquency.

New York.—Ten cities in which three-year demonstrations of visiting teacher work have been completed under the auspices of the commonwealth fund program for the prevention of delinquency have determined to continue the use of visiting teachers as a regular feature of their public school systems. According to Howard W. Nudd, director of the Public Educational Association of New York city and chairman of the national committee on visiting teachers which has administered these demonstrations, the communities thus convinced of the value of the visiting teacher and planning to continue her services include Burlington, Vt., Lincoln, Neb.; Richmond, Va.; Red Bank, N. J.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Sioux City, Iowa; Bluefield, W. Va.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Warren, Ohio, and Hutchinson, Kan.

Meanwhile, demonstrations are being continued by the national committee on visiting teachers in the following communities: Berkeley, Cal.; Birmingham, Ala.; Boone county, Missouri; Butte, Mont.; Charlotte, N. C.; Chisholm, Minn.; Coatesville, Pa.; Columbus, Ga.; Detroit, Mich.; Durham, N. C.; Eugene, Ore.; Huron county, Ohio; Omaha, Neb.; Pocatello, Idaho; Racine, Wis.; Rochester, Pa.; Rock Springs, Wyo.; San Diego, Cal.; Tucson, Ariz.; Tulsa, Okla.

Appointed by Committee. When the work is finished in these cities the thirty visiting teacher demonstrations under the commonwealth fund program will have been completed. Under the arrangements made for these demonstrations the visiting teachers were appointed by the national committee on visiting teachers subject to the approval of the local authorities; in each case the national committee pays two-thirds of the salary for a three-year period and provides funds for certain additional expenses, while the remainder of the salary is paid by the local school board. Several hundred cities have made application for demonstrations under this plan, but the thirty communities provided for in the original grant from the commonwealth fund having been chosen, no further applications are now being considered.

Including the visiting teachers appointed by the national committee for these demonstrations there are now altogether 136 visiting teachers in the United States working in 64 cities and 6 counties scattered through 34 states. These figures are given by Mr. Nudd in a chapter on the history, purpose and scope of the visiting-teacher movement, which he contributes to "The Problem Child in School," a volume of visiting teacher case narratives by Mary B. Sayles, just published by the Joint Committee on Methods of Preventing Delinquency, Inc., of 50 East Forty-second street, New York city.

Describing the visiting teacher as a specialist in the schools who devotes herself to the problems of unadjusted children, Mr. Nudd, in the article above referred to, points that "every teacher, every social worker, and many a parent is familiar with the problem child—the boy or girl whose school progress or whose reactions to normal requirements point toward later inefficiency, delinquency, or some other failure in personal or social adjustment. What is the trouble with such children, and what can be done for them? How can the school obtain and utilize a knowledge of the forces that are affecting their success, and give them in fullest measure the benefits of their educational experience? Puzzles or pests at home, in school, or elsewhere, their personal welfare and the welfare of society require painstaking effort in their behalf. They present at once the most baffling, the most urgent and the most interesting problems in the field of education."

Finds Needs of Children. Describing the methods of the visiting teacher in meeting these problems, which are both educational and social in nature, Mr. Nudd points out that this relatively new specialist, trained both as a teacher and social worker, "is specifically equipped not only to find out why things are not going right in the lives of these children but also to take back to the class teacher, the parent or the social agency which may help, the essential information needed to meet their individual limitations. As a result of the new facts she discovers the school is enabled to see what the actual situation is and to become aware of the real need of the child. It can often modify requirements to meet the newly seen limitations by changing the class, transferring the child to a special school, shifting emphasis from one phase of school work to another, adopting a new approach to the child or connecting his school work more closely with his outside interests."

MR. JOHN W. FLEMING DIES AT EAST BEND

Mr. John W. Fleming, aged 81 years died at his home at East Bend early Friday morning after a short illness. He was buried at East Bend cemetery Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Fleming was a well known and highly respected citizen and will be greatly missed by that community. He is survived by his widow and a score of other relatives.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the people who were so kind and helpful to us during the illness and after the death of our father, Davis M. Fletcher. The Family.

RIDIN', RIDIN', RIDIN'

Ridin', ridin', ridin', Ridin' all the time; Who cares about the cost of gas— A dollar or a dime? Everybody's ridin' 'round, All the world's a-quiver, Rich man in his limousine, Poor man in his flivver.

Craps-awaitein' in the field For the plow and hoe; Folks ain't got on time to work; Go somewhere to go." Boss man leaves the big house gate On a fishin' trip; Soon from every lane and road Flivvers hop and skip.

Mother needs a spool of thread, Store some three blocks far; Daughters volunteers to go— Jumps into the car; Comes across her "honey bunch" And they ride all day; For three punctures, gas and oil Father has to pay.

No one walks and no one works, But everybody fides, While behind each fence and post A bill collector hides. Folks will argue o'er the price Of clothes, and meat, and sup, And question on the gas man's word But holler "Fill 'er up".

Legs are long since out of date Save for the ballet, Stocking advertisements, Magazine's display; Soon like our appendices They'll be useless things; Next our arms will evolve Into feathered wings.

Ridin', ridin', ridin', Boy with his nurse; Old man taking his last ride In a motor hearse. Wonder where it all will end— Leave the guess to you. Got to get the old boat out And ride an hour or two.—Ex.

IT'S ENOUGH TO MAKE THEM POUND-R

O. O. McIntyre, noted observer of life in New York, says that "it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened."

Here are some of the effects of the sort of bootleg booze the New Yorkers have been drinking: A man under the influence of it hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window.

A musician married a girl whose name he could not remember the next morning.

A man who had two drinks drove his car into a plate glass window in order to hear the crash. A tipsy policeman entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

Some people who go to the theaters after having had "sniffers" topple from their seats in what seem to be almost epileptic seizures.

Men who used to go on a few days' spree find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a strange jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Such cases are enough to make people ponder before taking a drink of the stuff that is now sold as liquor.
