Roosevelt Sons

While millions of mothers' hearts ache as their sons register for the army draft, President Franklin D. Roosevelt stows away two of his sons in soft, secure positions from the atrocities of war. Elliott Roosevelt, a son, has been appointed a captain in the "procurement" division of the air corps, while another son, James Roosevelt, became a lieutenant-colonel of the U. S. Marines, a position regular officers usually attain in 20 years service. So the president is taking care of his sons in event of war by giving them fat, well paying posts in the military service—without the military service attained.

That Gallup Poll

Just where that Gallup poll comes from seems to be a growing question in the minds of the American people. In fact they are beginning to think the doctor is combing only certain classes of people who may give desired answers.

Just how it is done we do not know, but one thing is certain this writer is connected in business in several different ways; we belong to a number of business and social organizations and come in contact with about every cross section of people and business and never yet has the Gallup poll touched us or come into our associations in any way. Just how they could take a poll without contacting us in some manner is something we do not believe.

This much is certain: Dr. Gallup is getting his information from only certain sections and applying it to the country in general; or he is contacting a very exclusive class for his information. And either one is manifestly unfair to any candidate.

Preachers and Politics

It has been many years since Yadkin county had a minister take active part in the politics of the county, but now that one has entered the field as a candidate for county commissioner it naturally brings up the old question of whether a minister should add to his chosen field that of actively engaging in politics.

Many rumors of regret have come to town from the East Bend-Fall Creek district where Rev. Chas. H. Hutchens has accepted the nomination and agreed to make the race for commissioner. Many of Mr. Hutchens' friends who agree that he has done much good in his church work as an active young minister, point out that as the church congregations of that section are divided politically, his future church work will be impaired from his active part in a hot political campaign, regardless of what the result of the campaign might be.

Whatever one's opinion might be on the matter it is still a matter of regret that he should take the chance he is taking of hurting the work before him, which most likely would continue through many years, for the temporary gain he might win—and which would be still worse if he lost in this fight.

Rev. J. H. Green

Three years ago the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference sent Rev. John H. Green to Yadkinville to fill the duties of pastor of the Yadkin circuit of the Methodist church.

Mr. Green has had his hands full from the beginning. He started off with six or seven churches and the consolidation of all the elements of the Methodist churches only increased the work for Mr. Green.

However he organized his work so as to give each church every hour of work possible and for the three years he has been here he has done a wonderful work among the churches and the people of his various congregations. The churches have shown a gain in membership and the business conditions of the churches have improved each year.

Next week the Methodist conference meets again to make appointments for the churches of the western district. The people of the Yadkin circuit who have been served by Mr. Green for three years and who have come to know him and love him for his work, his patience and his faith, hope the conference will return him to the Yadkinville charge for another year. Their best wishes go with him to the conference at High Point next Tuesday and a hope that he will come back to them.

REVOLUTION PROPHECY

If F. D. R. should win this fall and start betraying
A third-term call to end our thrall
There's no assaying
What consequential aftermath
Of needless sorrow
May line the path of vengeful wrath
Some near tomorrow.

KEYHOLE

By BILL RUTLEDGE

DIARY OF A SAMUEL PEPYS
Dear Diary: Awoke at 8:30 and decided for once to arise early. To the bathroom, and washed huge circles of printer's ink from under eyes caused from press night. Shaved, and breakfasted frugally on corn flakes, making a note to tell the maid to tuck in the bottom of our blankets to avoid cold feet from now on. Off to the office and saw Hugh West who looks happily married, and wondered how he ever survived his jitterbugging days without a broken neck. Sorted the morning mail, and digested a missive from our New York correspondent which contained a cartoon from the New York Sun and an article entitled Today's Proverb which was another political poem.

Made a note to thank him and to also answer our old friend William Fuller in Gibson, Tenn., and invited him down for a few days to see if he's changed much since he used to room with us in college. To the morning Press, and read two back columns of Winchell left over from yesterday. Finally turned to the typewriter and battered out an article for next week's paper and one for the Sunday Journal, resolving to send the latter more pictures in the future. Down to Mrs. Inscore's boarding house for lunch and the crowd discussed various and sundry topics, finally concentrating on football as we delved into the apple pie and were carried down the ten yard line. Back on the square, and saw Constable Hugh Dinkins, who had just run down and captured sixty gallons of white booze from a rum-runner. To the office, and finished clearing the desk of miscellaneous items.

Off to Winston-Salem, and bartered with the force at Barber's Photo Supply Company, and were kidded roundly as usual about the Ripple's old weather forecast: Maybe rain, maybe not. Down to the Red Cross office, and saw Mrs. Winifred Black, chairman of the Forsyth County Chapter, who dumped thirty-five Red Cross First Aid textbooks into our arms and said to start teaching the senior class of Yadkinville High School one hour a week as soon as possible. Over to the Journal-Sentinel news room, and saw Frank Jones, Journal photographer, who ate all of the raisins out of the box we were carrying in our hand.

and walled into our ear that he was overworked and underfed as usual, and he did dash out with all his paraphernalia to cover a story, saying over his shoulder that the Draft would have us if we didn't watch out, ha, ha, which we already knew and which wasn't so funny.

Back to Yadkinville, and unloaded our shopping and dashed over to Dobbins' Mill pond, dipping 187 gallons of water out of ours and Sam Clement's motor boat and did ride for 30 minutes and saw we were getting no place and headed for the dock. Decision was made partly because we had shipped 23 gallons of water cutting curves too fast, and because Sam's gas was running low. Back to town and our developing room, and did make five enlargements of a recent wedding and one for a newspaper engraving, reflecting that this was perfect weather for correct temperatures in photographic work. A quick supper, and off to the theatre and saw "Mickey Rooney Meets Debutante," which was about as good as the other Judge Hardy pictures, and wondering if Mickey isn't growing shorter every year. To the drug store, and entered into a conversation on what Roosevelt's foreign policy should be, and read part of Liberty Magazine.

Home, and to bed.
