PAGES FROM A REPORTER'S NOTE BOOK

A fantastic, chaotic, hodgepodge thing is the notebook every writer carries always in his pocket.

A quoted snatch of someone's conversation . . . A single word, NATIONAL hastily jotted down to help remember some bit of news or some slice of life, some comedy or tragedy that has come to the writer's attention . . . An isolated statistical fact, picked up while reading a report or meeting a person or hearing a story.

A hodge-podge thing, chaotic thing-the notebook that a columnist compiles as he goes seeing, hearing, noting down. For instance, we turn the pages of our little notebook . . .

The Girl Just two words, crowded off in a corner of the last page-The Girl. We always thought we would write a paragraph about her, but the simple notation has been gathering dust, surrounded by scrawls and tid-bits of information for month after month. The Girl walked into the office, slowly hobbling on crutches, carrying a brief-case in one hand. She was a magazine salesgirl, she said, from Warm Springs, Ga., where she had been recovering from an illness. She was not working her way through college or securing points to be a nurse; she was just selling magazines. We shook our head. If we read all the publications we have access to we wouldn't even have time to write this column each week. Her clear blue eyes held a puzzled, weary look that only a girl without parents or a home and only a few scattered friends could hold as she picked up her brief-case and hobbled March 4, 1933. toward the door. A few seconds later we had relented. Another magazine was on our list.

STATE

WINDSOR, Nov. 6 .--- A "whispering campaign" was the downfall of a Snake Bite, N. C., township officer in yesterday's general election. Henry Dempstable for many years and was unopposed for re-election until the last moment. But word got Given Free to around yesterday morning that Dempsey was a Willkie man. When the township votes were counted, Dempsey had 23 and write-in candidate, Roy Stocks, had 78. But the township cast 159 votes for President Roosevelt and none for Wendell Willkie - and now everyone is wondering just how that rumor got started.

ALTHOUGH Wendell L. Willkie is running well behind President Roosevelt, he is making a better showing in both electoral votes and popular votes than Alf M. Landon did in 1936. Landon had 8 electoral votes to 523 for Roosevelt. Early Wednesday Willkie had captured, or held the lead in states with 98 electoral votes, as against a tentative total of 433 for Roosevelt.
