 C. W. ROBINSON.
 Nov. 23d, 1887.
 Dr. Joyner spent several days last week with us and we are glad to learn that he was busy every day. He done more work this trip than any other he has yet made. This plainly shows that what he has heretofore done answered as a recommendation and caused others to hunt him up. He does the very best work at very reasonable prices.
 TOBACCO—Lee's Warehouse, Danville, Va. Messrs. T. J. Corbin & Co., proprietors, recommends itself to the planters for its superiority over all other warehouses in that city. Its building leaf tobacco as regards location, height and storage capacity, being 110 ft wide and 200 ft long, basement for storage same size, with cold sky-lights. Insurance and storage free—make a note of this and write for information in regard to tobacco. Cap Pack is connected with the above house.
 The physicians of the county met the 15th, and re-organized the "Caswell Med. Society." Dr. Geo. Gunn was elected president, and Dr. J. S. Cook, Sec'y and Dr. J. C. Walton, Treas'r. The next meeting of the society will be held at Yanceyville the first Monday in Dec., at 1 o'clock. All the physicians in the county are earnestly requested to attend for further organization. Milton Advertiser please note.
 Mr. Howard Cobb, of Acree's Warehouse, Danville, left on our table last week a child's picture book crowded with charming pictures and humorous, sentimental and sentimental stories and poems. It is one of the most unique original advertising mediums we have seen. The warehouse advertisement appears only on the covers, and you take tobacco to Danville and you can get one, and you can also make your tobacco bring more worth.

 For several weeks editors and publishers have been writing us letters similar to the one given below, in which Hale's latest scheme to "raise the wind" is exposed:
 LUM SMITH, Dear Sir—In 1884 I offered "Health and Home" with my paper as a premium, and when I found out through your exposures that its editor was a fraud, I withdrew my offer, but many had already taken it. I heard no more of the matter, and supposed of course that all "Health and Home" were stopped at end of year. Now I find out that my patrons of that clubbing arrangement are getting threatening duns from the "Chicago and Cook Co. Collection Agency," in which $2.50 is claimed from each subscriber. I desire to know if you can furnish me with copies of your Agent's Herald containing the exposures of the "Dr." who edits "Health and Home."
 I have written the "agency" to stop the claims, and desire all I can get to use in defense. Can you supply this or any other evidence, and what will you charge?
 Resp. J. A. CLARK, Ed. Enterprise.
 Of course Hale is only playing the game of "bluff." He dare not sue anybody. Hale has had considerable experience with courts, but at an arraigned criminal. It is hardly possible he will seek the meshes of the law when it has cast him so much to keep out of the law's clutches. Why, he has a scheme all at now that may cost him his liberty. He is selling, or rather trying to sell, stock in an alleged "Publishing Co." that is supposed to be engaged in publishing his fraudulent "Health and Home." The stock is worse than worthless and if any one is foolish enough to buy it Hale will have to look up another bottom. The safe way is to have nothing to do with Hale and his schemes.—Philadelphia Herald.
 We likewise had a contract with the "Dr." to send "Health and Home" as a premium to subscribers to the NEWS. The paper did not come regularly—about once in three months, and after the contract expired it still come, occasionally. We supposed he was sending it to make out the year, and so told our patrons, but this spring each one received threatening duns through a collection agency. We advised every we could see to pay no attention to the notices and threats. Two or three that we failed to see sent the amount claimed.
