He Shot a Centipode Od His Toe. A company of immigrants had camped in New Mexico, and one night one of the party, who was sleeping on the ground, was awakened by a peculiar sensation on his toes. He looked and saw an enormous- centipede crawiing across his foot. Only a few feet from him was the camp-lice, and he could see every fibre of the reptile. Knowing its peculiarities and the effect of its sting, he was in a fever of excitement. Afraid to move a muscle, he dared not attempt to sliake it off. After a second's pausable reached under his head, got his pistol, and taking deliberats aim, fired. It was a life-saving shot for the man. The centipede divided and dropped on each side of his foot. But here comes the most remarkable part of the story. Within an hour after the shot was fired the men heard a terrible grouning from one of their nulls tial only a few yards away. They went to them and found one of them with his left foreleg swollen to an immensesize. Theswelling increased, as did the agony and groans of the brute, until it died in about thirty minutes thereafter. An examination was made and it was discovered that the bullet that had severed the centipede had entered the mule's foot just above the hoof and inoculated it with the poison from the reptile.
