I SHALL NOT FORGET

The little kindnesses I may have shown

The burdens that I may have helped to bear

But this I know, when the long hours pass

I shall look back and wish that I had done

When I turn in at evening to my door.

For comrades walking with me down the way.

These are the things that I shall not forget

Cutworms would not be so wholly despised if they really ate all of the plants they destroy. Just cutting off the stalks and leaving the plant, o branch of it, to wither and die seems about the meanest thing even a worm could think of.

One of Uncle Sam's bulletins says that the following poison will kill cutworms, of which there are several kinds, all changing into moths in the late summer:

One ounce Paris given or white arsenic.

1 1-4 pounds dry bran.

4 ounces, or 8 tablespoonfuls, molasses or sirup. 1-2 pint of water.

Mix all together well, first mixing the Paris green with the bran Let it stand for several hours, then scatter it thinly along the row, or around the plants, after sundown.
