Doctors Fear Socialization

The North Carolina Medical Society held its annual convention at Pinehurst this week. Several of the speakers emphasized the danger of "socializing medicine." The doctors are somewhat more concerned than other professions about the trend toward socialization of all public services, but there seems little they can do about it.

Besides, some of the more prominent physicians who are also interested financially in hospitals, asked the legislature of this state to take a step toward "socializing" them when it asked for tax exemption on facilities used in treatment of charity cases. Which leads to the conclusion that their fear of "socialization" is inspired by selfish interest rather than the public good.

Record Subscriber Insulted

"Believe it or not" but when we sent out notices reminding our subscribers that perhaps their subscriptions had expired, many of them immediately sent us $1.00 for another year. Some even took the trouble to tell us how much they appreciated the Record.

But not all were so prompt in paying. A number have not yet even returned our postage envelope. One—we are glad to say only one—wrote us a really negative love letter telling us among other things that never before had that subscriber got a dun (referring to our notice) and ordered us to stop the paper at once. We are sorry any subscriber misunderstood our notice of renewal sent along with a special club offer.

Now we get a letter every once in awhile reminding us that a bill is past due. We have had dozens of them and have never yet seen where we had any reason to get offended because a man whom we owed took the less expensive way of reminding us of our obligation. Of course we could have gone to see our subscribers who are in arrears and asked them personally to pay us but in some instances the expense would have been more than the price of the paper.

The editor wishes to assure his subscribers that no offense whatever is intended when a statement or reminder is sent to our subscribers. Hereafter, in order to cut expenses, we shall have to send printed notice of expiration of subscriptions. We'll send 2 of these—one just before the subscription runs out—and the other immediately afterwards. Then, if payment is not made we shall have to discontinue sending the Record to that person.

We appreciate our subscribers and assure them that we shall give them the very best newspaper in our power. We thank each of you, and are your servants.

THEO B. DAVIS, Editor
