

Wallace is Czar of U.S. Road Money

It would be hard to say who is the most powerful man in the national administration, but the recent arrangement whereby Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is given complete control of the federal highway funds puts him in the running for the most powerful. Rules approved by the President permit Mr. Wallace to go over the heads of state highway commissions and deal directly with towns and counties in the allocation of the hundreds of millions of federal highway money.

Textile Strike At St. Pauls

Several hundred employees of the cotton mill at St. Pauls, Robeson county, are out on strike. An unusual feature of this strike is that most of the strikers are stockholders in the mill, having taken stock as part pay for their work during the past few years. They allege that the management reduced wages unreasonably following termination of NRA codes.

FARM NOTES

By T. H. LeCROY

In most cases it is best to throw old hens into a moult at this season of the year by taking them off mash and feeding corn. That will put most hens back into laying during the late fall and early winter when egg prices are generally better. As soon as the hens complete moulting, they should be fed laying mash and if they fail to come out of the moult rapidly enough, a wet mash of the laying ration should be fed in the middle of the day.

When hens become infected with chicken pox or sorehead, it proves expensive to the commercial poultryman. Now is the best time to vaccinate chickens for pox. The cost is small and the benefits may be great.

Care should be exercised at this time of year with work-stock to prevent colic. Mules and horses should not be fed as heavily on corn now that less work has to be done with them. Workstock need much less heat producing feed when they are not working. Oats are an excellent feed for work-stock as a maintenance ration.

For those who are interested, budding of apples, peaches, pears and pecans should be done between now and September. Buds of the tree from which you wish to get more fruit should be placed in a T cut in the bark on the tree you wish to bud into and tied with a string. More buds should be put into the tree than you wish to leave and the tree into which you are budding need not be cut back now but later when some of the buds start growing.

Badly diseased stalks of tobacco should be pulled up and removed from the field to prevent in so far as possible the spreading of the disease from carrying over into next year.

Fall gardens should be planted as soon as possible. Early planting of fall vegetables may be the difference between success and failure.

Processing Taxes Unconstitutional?

A federal district court judge at Boston has ruled that the processing taxes levied under the AAA are unconstitutional. The case decided was brought by a group of

New England textile mills. Judge Hayes, in Middle N. C. District, has the same question under consideration on petition of several North Carolina mills. Flour mills in the middle west have also started action along the same line. Some of the cases will get to the supreme court this fall.

Senator Bailey voted against the processing taxes when first presented, declaring that they were unconstitutional.

Dries Appeal Case In Vance County

A group of dries have arranged to appeal the recent ruling of Judge W. A. Devin in the Vance county liquor election case. Judge Devin expressed the opinion that the Pasquotank act was constitutional and permitted Vance to vote on the issue of the county operating liquor stores. The election was held and the advocates of legal liquor won by a substantial margin. Stores are being opened in Vance and other counties, and the "dries" don't like it. The supreme court will get the appeal this fall.
