HIGH LIGHTS IN THE LIFE OF A FARMER'S WIFE

Each afternoon at five o'clock we hear the honk of an automobile horn and know the Evening Times is being left for us. I look forward to the short article by Mrs. Roosevelt; it shows me all women are so near alike. One day I rode to Wendell with my husband and son. While they attended to business, I went into a drug store, took a comfortable seat and greeted many friends as they came in. I was specially interested in a small, well-dressed lady who was having two prescriptions filled. I caught her eye and asked her to sit down and talk awhile. I always imagine women on the farm are tired. She told me she had eight children, most of them small, several in school. I asked if she had any help and she said none except her husband and children; that he always made the morning fires, brought in water, made the coffee, sliced the meat and helped her get a good start for the day. The children spread the beds and swept the house. I told her I know all the high lights and low lights of rearing eight children as that is the number I reared. I asked what papers and magazines she takes and she said News & Observer, Zebulon Record, Progressive Farmer, Delineator. A good selection. She said one of the little girls had an abscess and I asked if the prescriptions were for her. She said the medicine was for herself; that she sometimes had to take something to keep her going. I was glad she was looking after her health and my heart rejoiced that farm women can enjoy the same things city women do, planting flowers, reading, writing and having a good time.—Mrs. Ed. V. Richardson, Rosedale Manor.

BAILEY NEWS

LICE RETARD GROWTH OF HEIFERS, CALVES

Cattle lice are a serious handicap to the development of calves and heifers.

When infested with lice, the young animals rub against posts and trees, wearing away their hair and inflaming their skin. Sometimes the calves become thin and weak from loss of weight.

In the late winter and early spring, said Fred M. Haig, associate professor of animal husbandry and dairying at State College, dairymen should inspect calves to see whether they are infested with lice.

The insects are found mostly around the necks and shoulders of the animals, but they also infest other parts of the body.

The first step in eradicating lice is to clean and disinfect the stalls thoroughly. After removing the bedding and sweeping the stalls, disinfect them with a five per cent solution of any good coal tar disinfectant.

Allow the stalls to dry, then whitewash the interior. When the whitewash is dry, place plenty of straw bedding or other clean material in the stalls.

Meanwhile, apply to the calves a solution of one ounce of sodium fluoride in a gallon of water. Brush it in thoroughly so that it will reach every part of the body and penetrate loose folds of skin.

Tie the animals in a sunny place protected from drafts until they are dry. The calves are then ready to be placed back in the newly disinfected stalls, and a second treatment will hardly be necessary unless they become infested again from other animals.

Smith-Douglas Offers Prizes

Information has been received from Mr. R. B. Douglass, Vice-President of the Smith-Douglass Company, his company's prize contest for farm boys and girls under 18 years of age has started off with a rush of enthusiasm among those eligible even greater than last year.

The contest this year, which offers $1500 in 399 prizes, with a first prize of $150, is based on finding the greatest number of objects whose names begin with S or D in a picture which is now being distributed to interested boys and girls by Smith-Douglass salesmen and agents.

The Smith-Douglass prize contest last year drew over 20,000 entries from boys and girls.

This year's contest, based on the picture, requires nothing to sell and nothing to buy. It is simply a test of sharpness of eye and knowledge of words. There are no tricks or catches in the contest.

Any boy or girl aged 18 years or under, living in North Carolina or Virginia and in a family where farming is the chief livelihood, may enter this contest. The first prize is $150; the next $100. There are three prizes of $50 each and 394 other cash prizes.

Every Smith-Douglass representative and agent has folders which give the complete rules of the contest and contain a large size picture from which to work. These will be distributed free to everyone who wants to enter this contest, upon request to the Smith-Douglass agent. The contest begins immediately and ends March 15th.

Oldest Chevrolet

The Chevrolet Motor Company conducted a contest recently to find the oldest Chevrolet in daily use in America. Hiram H. Dohner, a 70 year old carpenter of Quentin, Pa., was found to have a 1913 Royal Mail roadster. He has driven it for 22 years and over a quarter of a million miles. The car is in fine running condition and Mr. Dohner will shortly drive it to Detroit where the Chevrolet Co. will present him with the millionth car built in 1935, a 1936 model.

The Negro race will be recognized at the Texas Centennial Exposition with $100,000 Hall of Negro Life and culture in which will be portrayed the history and progress of the Negro in America. This is the first World's Fair to officially recognize and honor the Negroes or America.

'Tis said that the measure of a man's real character is what he would do if he was never found out.

Oh, how I dread a certain girl
And hate to see her come—
The one who pauses in her talk
To pop her chewing gum.
