Mrs. G. S. Barbee's class in piano gave their annual recital on Thursday night, too late for an account to be printed this week.

In a ball game on the Wakelon diamond Tuesday, the home team defeated Wendell.

Mrs. F. E. Bunn's seventh grade enjoyed to the fullest a picnic dinner given them on Wednesday by Mesdames R. E. Pippin and M. J. Sexton, grade mothers.

The seventh grade commencement exercises will be held on Thursday afternoon of next week. Always well planned, this program is rivaled each year by only the high school graduating exercises.

On Friday night of this week Society exercises will be held. Gertrude Carter and Talmadge Harper will debate against Kay Kemp and Mike Eddins. Readers are Cornelia Herring and Alpha Mae Eddins. Declaimers, G. W. May and Charles Winsted.

BARBECUE PICNIC

Mrs. J. O. Newell, grade mother, and Mr. E. C. Stallings, grade father, were hosts to the seniors and the high school faculty last Friday evening at a picnic given on the Tarpley Mill picnic grounds. Delicious barbecue and lemonade and cake were served.

WEINER ROAST

The seniors were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Moser Tuesday evening at a weiner roast down by the river. Marshmallows were toasted and a very jolly time was enjoyed by the bonfire.

Besides the child killed 17 others were injured. The accident occurred in Moore county about six miles from Carthage. A brother of Earl was driving the bus.

asked what time said husband would be home and looked surprised when I said it was very uncertain. He wanted to know if those blanks could not be filled out before we went to sleep, but I couldn't promise. There's something about a revival meeting and company meals that unfits a man for jotting down figures at midnight.

Then, gently persuasive, the visitor requested me to have my husband fill out the blanks bright and early the next morning when he was all fresh and rested and had nothing else to do. That sounded so nice that I agreed to do my best.

Accordingly, on Saturday morning just before six o'clock when we awoke and my spouse (I hate that word, but I have said husband so many times I want to make a change) remarked that he hoped it would rain and that he'd try to fix that chicken-lot gate and hoe out the spring-planted strawberries before he went to work I reminded him of those blanks. I impressed on his mind the eagerness of those Raleigh folks to get rid of their jobs and dwelt upon how reprehensible it would be of us to cause them to be kept on. And I added that he was supposed to fix that report in the calm morning hours when he had nothing on his mind and nothing at all to do. For all our sakes I'd rather not tell what he said. But he tried once more to write down what they wanted and we hope they sent the right papers this time.

In conclusion I'd say that if I hear of Uncle Sam's fussing at those Raleigh workers for not winding up their job as scheduled, I'm going to write as one relative to another and tell him they had to sit around for at least two whole days, not to mention nights, while they waited for the Record report to be sent in, and could let down the windows, lock the doors and go home.

But they did send us the wrong blanks the first time.
