

GENERAL NEWS

SOAP BOX DERBIES

In 120 cities of the United States 200,000 boys between the ages of nine and fifteen will compete — or have competed — in soap box derbies this summer. The champion of each city will go to Akron, Ohio on August 15 for the all-American competition.

Soap-box racing has been recognized as a sport for only a few years. The racer must be built by the one who runs it and must not cost more than ten dollars. The first prize in the national event is a four-year college scholarship. Entrants will compete from South America, Hawaii, Mexico and Canada as well as from cities of this country.

Raleigh is the nearest city having a derby this summer. Chevrolet dealers will supply rule books to boys desiring to enter the races.

CAREFUL WITH ELECTRIC FENCES

Now that electric current is widely available farmers will be besought by agents to purchase electric fencing. They will be told that the cost will be much less than other fences which may be true. Unless the electric fencing is manufactured by a reputable concern, it may be dangerous, because the voltage may not be what is needed. Numerous instances have already been recorded of animals being killed by too high a charge in the fencing. Horses are said to be unable to stand as much shock as other farm beasts. Damp weather also causes charges to be more severe than does dry.
