

WILSON

By Geo. L. Wainwright

Activities were very pleasing on the Wilson tobacco market for the past week and all tobacco farmers received more money by selling on this huge tobacco center.

As sales got underway last Monday several thousand farmers representing every tobacco growing county in eastern Carolina had deposited hundreds of thousands of pounds of tobacco on Wilson's nine warehouse floors. The first few hours of selling brought much encouragement as the various grades took an upward trend in price. Optimism prevailed throughout the day. For the remainder of the week prices continued strong and held to the same price level as was paid on Monday.

Wilson is offering tobacco farmers at this time a market that has an unexcelled buying corps that have heavy orders. These buyers are backed by the strongest tobacco companies, numbering ten in all, and have instructions to get tobacco. This buying personnel is really paying a higher dollar for all grades of leaf.

Wilson is truly setting a pace this season, and one that would do any market proud. It is paying a higher dollar and is making more new friends this year for the length of time it has been operating than has ever before been the case. A greater quantity of long distance tobacco is being sold on the local market this year and high individual averages are being paid for this product. Wilson's long distance grade is picking up daily and farmers of three states are patronizing this market.

The Wilson tobacco market has sold this season through Thurs., Sept. 9, a total of 9,201,634 pounds and has distributed to farmers the grand total of $1,922,186.57 at a higher average price.

LITTLE CHILDREN ARE FEWER

A probable decline of 90,000 pupils in public elementary schools is anticipated by the United States Office of Education. It is because of lower birth-rates, which have shown a decline since 1928.

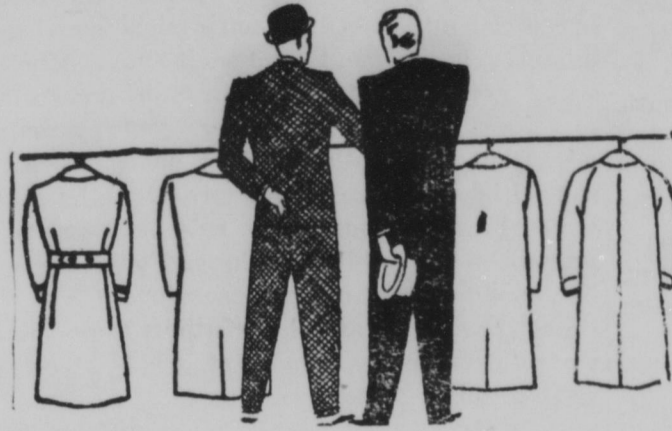

There's a problem for America to solve.

NEW PEANUT SYSTEM

From Washington comes news of a plan to divert peanuts to other uses besides eating. Oil and by-products are the items mainly in view and it is hoped that the program may be effective in a month.

The aim is to have a fixed price for peanuts not meant for eating, and the federal government is expected to advance funds for payment.
