TODAY I SAW A CROCUS

Today I saw a crocus
Today I heard the sound
Of tender brooks that murmur
Under snowy ground.
I heard the sob and gurgle
Of melting ice on eaves
Yielding to the miracle
Of eager-thrusting leaves.

Today I saw a robin,
Today a snowdrop pushed
Its delicate head above the earth.
And pussy-willows brushed
My shoulder as I wandered;
And I could almost feel
The emerald shoots of new-born grass
Under my heel!
