Governor Hoey Becomes Safety Crusader

Surrounded by other state officials, Governor Clyde R. Hoey, of North Carolina, is pictured here as he signed the No. 1 pledge card in the Pur-Pep Drive Safety Crusade now in progress. Thousands of other North Carolinians have signed the pledge cards distributed by the Pure Oil company. With Governor Hoey in this picture are, left to right, Thad Eure, secretary of state; R. M. Morris; George Ross Pou, state auditor; LeRoy Allen, president of the Raleigh safety council; Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer; Dan C. Boney, state insurance commissioner; William J. Weber, of The Raleigh Times; Burrell Correll, commander of Raleigh Post No. 1, American Legion; Frank Daniels, of the News and Observer; Arthur Fulk, head of the state highway patrol; and Jerome Rosenthal.

Granting that a good many persons will enjoy the commencement at Wakelon this year, I am fairly certain that the ones who'll have most pleasure in the occasion will be the former graduates who come back for the reunion scheduled for the afternoon of commencement day. They'll have most to talk about; they'll be proudest of all the improvements and enlargements; most hopeful for the future; and will be exceeded in pride in the seniors only by the immediate families of class members. Which is all as it should be.

I hope if any alumnus has a picture of his class in any grade he will bring it along. Nothing could be more interesting. For the past two weeks I have enjoyed looking again and again at a picture of a fifth grade taught at Wakelon by Miss Julia Staples twenty-three years ago. In the group are Vida Bell, Fannie Lou Wiggs, Thelma Clark, Foy Whitley, Elsie Horton, Inez Horton, Helen Horton, Mary Bunn, Myrtle Jones, and many more. Mozelle Robertson is there and her youngest sister, Louise, seeing the photograph, asked to be allowed to borrow it to show to Mozelle's husband. She said she is sure he will enjoy seeing it, even if Mozelle wouldn't. Edgar and Ruth Padgett are in the picture, as are Estelle Chamblee, Lois Gettys, and Charlie Batts. Staley Denton is on the front row, and so is Chamblee Wheless with his tongue stuck out. Wallace Chamblee and Sam Harris are sitting on the window ledge with some others I can't recognize. My daughter is among the rest, and when she was looking at the picture Sunday she exclaimed, "Look at Channie Whitley, with his sweater on top of his coat—and shorter! It always looked funny, but he did love to wear it that way." In a minute she began laughing again and said it was because seeing Douglas Bain in the group reminded her of the time they were coming from school and he climbed a tree to get her some mistletoe. She waited on the ground—and waited. At last Douglas called down and told her she'd better go on home and he'd bring her the mistletoe next day. He explained that he had torn his

Small Fire, Big Excitement

Tuesday morning was a quiet, dull time in town till the fire siren sent out its wild screech. People seemed to appear from nowhere and run and ride towards the oil mill where a black smoke rolled skyward. The editor got in his car, picked up a colored man who was sure it was his home burning up (he had just taken a dram of high smelling liquor which may have accounted for his certainty), and soon we were among a hundred others standing gazing at Floyd Pearce's wash house at the Alex Carter place.

Soon the small house was a blackened, charred frame with smoke and steam rolling from the ruins. Mrs. Phelps' home on one side and the Carter house on the other were both in grave danger had it not been for the quick answer of the fire department. The side of one was blackened and the roof of the other blazed, but no great damage was done to either. The fire is supposed to have originated from a sack which caught fire near the wash pot.

Many farmers from the country hurried in and many visitors in town along with the business people of the town almost made a circus crowd in size. The house must have been built of light wood; blacker smoke is seldom seen from a burning building.

Wakelon Needs Twelfth Grade

(The following article was contributed by Dr. L. M. Massey, chairman of the County Board of Elections as well as of the local school board. We are glad to give space to a discussion of a topic so vital to community progress.)

—Editor.)

If we do in this community what is expected of us for our high school children a twelfth grade is a necessity. Many of our girls and boys can't go to college. Many of them are too immature and too young to secure worth while jobs when they finish high school. Another year of definite training in high school will give many of them the needed chance for security. Many of our eleventh grade graduates, who can go to college, need another year in high school for the same reason that they are too immature for college work.

The high school period is one of the most important periods in the life of a child. He usually enters the high school at the adolescent age, and sometimes gets out of high school before his emotions and ideals are settled. He is sent away to college when he needs the guidance, direction, and discipline of parents and sympathetic high school teachers. We owe it to our children in this community to give them this extra year of opportunity for growth and maturity so that they will be better seasoned and better fitted to meet the strenuous life of college or job.

The local cost is small; fifteen cents on the one-hundred dollars, one dollar and fifty cents on a thousand. Our local interest in the school will be keenly enhanced by making this small increase in expenditure.

We have no motive in this matter, except the real need involved and a real desire to make the school do all it can for the children of this community. Our children have a right to expect the best training that a community can give them. In the light of our interests in our children we believe that we (Continued On Page Two)
