FEW N. C. JAILS APPROVED BY U. S.

North Carolina's jail system falls far under federal standards for the safe-keeping of prisoners with only 32 jails in the 100 counties being approved by the federal Bureau of Prisons, while the unapproved units still house thousands of North Carolina citizens each year.

"Many cities maintain jails in addition to the counties," said Dr. J. Wallace Nygard, director of the division of institutions and corrections of the state Board of Charities and Public Welfare, after making a study last month of jail conditions, "and as a general thing, conditions in the city jails are worse than those in the county units.

"There are too many jails in the state," he said, "because the counties are not taking advantage of the legislative provision allowing two or more adjacent units to maintain district jails.

"Counties with small financial resources could provide socially satisfactory institutions in district jails with a great saving of money to the taxpayers of the cooperating counties.

"Seventy-eight thousand commitments, many of them repeating offenders, were made in North Carolina jails in 1937.

"About 30 percent of the jail population was serving sentence, while the rest was awaiting trial or sentence, or being held as witnesses.

"Despite a statute requiring medical examination of all prisoners within 48 hours after incarceration, about half the jailors in North Carolina call a physician only on complaint of illness from a prisoner.

"Under the present practice syphilitics, insane, tubercular, feeble-minded, juveniles accidental offenders and vicious criminals often are herded together, though recently constructed units have made other provisions.

"Under the law now, plans for new jails must be approved by the state fire marshal, the sanitary engineering division of the Board of Health, and by the Board of Charities and Public Welfare.

"Five separate apartments must be provided with accessible toilet and bath, adequate air, light and heat, exercise space, and quarters for an attendant to be on duty at all times.

"A separate juvenile section in the jail does not meet the requirements as ruled by the attorney general calling for segregation of children from adult prisoners.

"Too many children are being confined in jails and there should be more cooperation between the local welfare departments and juvenile court officials in finding disposition other than jail detention for children."

God gave us two ends, one to sit on and the other to think with. A man's success depends upon which end he uses most. It's a case of heads you win and tails you lose.

Where's Elmer?

The picnic lunch was neatly spread
And ready to be eaten;
For good times outings such as this
I tell you, can't be beaten.

But o'er the hill what doth approach
With bellows most appalling?
The lady shrieks and starts to run,
For Elmer loudly calling.

But where is Elmer? He should be
In sight this time, I ween;
But he was at his favorite store
The last time he was seen.

MISS GILL ENTERTAINS

Miss Catrina Gill entertained at bridge on Tuesday having a party in the afternoon and another at night. On the first occasion there were five tables. Prize for high score, a service tray with tea glasses, went to Mrs. A. V. Medlin. Mrs. M. M. Faison won bath powder for low score. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. E. T. Boyette, Mrs. J. T. Allen, Mrs. Paul Brantley of Wendell.

Those at night were the members of the Friendly Thirteen Club and additional guests. Club prize went to Mrs. Raleigh Alford for high score. Miss Cabell Campen made high score for guests. Low score prize went to Mrs. H. C. Wade. A gift was presented Mrs. Rudie Beyer of Flushing, N. Y. special guest. Others from out of town were Mrs. Ira Johnston, Mrs. Craven Broughton, Miss Marjorie Richardson, all of Wendell.

WILSON PREPARES FOR FESTIVAL

In preparation for the second annual North Carolina Tobacco Exposition and Festival to be held at Wilson on August 15th through 18 officials of the affair announced yesterday that 47 girls have entered the contest for queen which will be one of the major attractions of the four day festivity.

Mayors of some 100 towns and cities in North Carolina were issued invitations requesting they elect a representative young lady of their town or city to attend to compete for the honor of queen, and entrants are being received as a response to these invitations.

For the Governor's luncheon on the fourth day of the festival, which will include the presence of the Hon. Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina and many state officials, around two score of mayors throughout the state have indicated they will also be present.

Announcement was recently made by officials of the exposition that around $210.00 would be given away to farmers participating in the tobacco exhibits contest to be staged in one of the local tobacco ware houses.

A greater interest is being worked up over the festival this year than for anything that has ever before taken place in Wilson.
