FAMILIAR THINGS

It is familiar things that rest the heart.
Blue braided rugs, sunlit upon the floor,
One pine, one star, the dusk has set apart,
And laughter filtering through a neighbor's door;
A woodland path the feet have often followed,
And twittering birds, and silver-flowing brooks;
A bowl of fruit, and plates, and cups smooth-hollowed,
And kittens purring through the noon, and books;
An old, old air upon a violin,
The lovely birth and dying of the year,
A house serene and orderly within,
And someone speaking gentle words, and dear.

MISS HOYLE ENTERTAINS CLUB

On Saturday night of last week Miss Jane Hoyle was hostess to the Literary Club of the Black Creek school where she taught last year and for some years previously. The young people made the trip in a truck and cars, arriving about eight o'clock. The program was on poetry, several of the members taking part after which Mrs. Theo. Davis spoke, calling attention to some of the poetry found in the Bible.

A social was enjoyed after the club meeting. Mrs. Hoyle invited the guests to the kitchen where coals glowed in the open fireplace, while on a table were heaps of frankfurters, rolls, bowls of minced onions and tomato sauce, marshmallows, and pitchers of tea. ## LIGHT IN THE SCHOOLHOUSE

(An editorial in THE ROTARIAN Magazine)

"Teacher's working late tonight," they used to say if they saw a light in the schoolhouse after, say 5 o'clock. But not now. More and more the ever-lighted schoolhouse is becoming a fact, as new communities brighten to the realization that, as an after-hours' center for adult cultural and social activities, it offers the finest opportunities.

Folk schools of countries like Denmark, where grown-ups often continue their classroom education all through life, have won wide attention. And an inspiring example of community education and neighborliness is found in the little town of Solomon, Kansas. Solomon has only about 1,000 people. It has no picture shows, no clubs; yet approximately 5,000 folks live within eight miles, and for most of them the high-school building is a natural focusing point for recreation, entertainment, self-improvement.

The building is open five nights a week, except during Summer. There is no attempt to formalize the schools' open house. Half a dozen farm organizations hold their meetings in the schoolhouse. For the rest, people come, as to a reunion, to meet friends, to play games, to take part in plays and concerts, or to listen to them, to hear lectures, to play bridge, table tennis, basketball. Townsmen eagerly give credit for the idea to a certain public-spirited educator who, during his superintendency of the school, won for his plan the support of a progressive school board—and a place in the budget for lights, heat, and shower baths. No one, truth to tell, needed to be "sold" to the ever-lighted school-house idea.

All told, Solomon is a striking example of how a community may be vivified by having a common focusing point for neighborly activities and interests. The school itself takes on new life. There has been only one truancy in seven years. The school band of 100 pieces (the school's total enrollment is 150) has been heard in Kansas City, Missouri, and Chicago. Every boy physically able plays in intramural sports.

The world spends billions on education. In the United States parents support a 10-billion-dollar educational plant. The huge investment in every community can and should be made to yield a richer life for old and young alike. The light in the schoolhouse may point the way.
