

This, That, & The Other

that I fear to use it much. So many of my friends will not have gaiety and fun this December 25th. And it is of them I am thinking most. For them I wish widely different things, hard to express in words. It is not material gifts I desire for them, but that Christmas might bring an answer to their most desperate spiritual need; surcease, if only for a while from the pain, disappointment, sorrow, or bitterness that life has brought; lifting, if only for an instant, of the clouds in their skies; knowledge, however imperfect, of the peace that the Christ-child came to bring.

And for you who may fittingly be wished a very merry Christmas, I am wishing it with all my heart.

Christmas

The best loved season the whole year round,
There's more joy and love to be found.

Our hearts overflow with love for each other,

We want to help and comfort our needy brother.

Our souls are gladdened by the radiant smile,

Of some waiting, anxious, eager child.

We recall the story of our Saviour's birth,

And of the angel's songs of "Peace on Earth."

Of the shepherds led by the guiding star,

And the wise-men's journey from afar,

This old-new story we love to retell,

Its peace in our hearts will forever dwell.

The Christmas decorations make a beautiful show,

We are glad to help those who are feeling low.

Their tear-dimmed eyes and thankful expression,

Immediately show us their appreciation.

We want our good deeds and spreading of cheer,

To make somebody's Christmas happy this year.

—Ercelle Littleton
Christmas

We celebrate Christmas because it is the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. This holiday should be celebrated peacefully, but happily. This is the time we all look forward as giving gifts, and making people happy. The children always look forward to having a Christmas tree, and best of all looking for Santa Claus to bring them toys. Everybody looks as being home on this day with all the family. This is a special holiday of the year when we should all be happy. —Mazie Horton

A week ago last Monday night our siren notified us of a fire within the vicinity. We found it was a small house behind our hotel where three of our local boys lived. The same situation as it might have happened 2,000 years ago in Rome is related below. The resemblance to anyone living today is purely coincidental.

Reference is hereby had for a further and more adequate description of the said lands to Book 583 at page 381 in the office of the Register of Deeds of Wake County, N. C.

Huge Fire In Rome Last Night
Local Boy Hero—Saves Idol Dwelling of three well-known bachelors completely demolished by fire

Rome—At 9:30 last night the entire population was startled by a raging fire which was seen for miles around. From temples and homes poured forth throngs of people to witness the spectacle. The structure which Snoodlebut-ton Sawyer, Doodlebug Narron, and Hammerhead Kenedy, three local bachelors, chose to call home, was in flames by the time the good women of the community arrived on the scene with pitchers of water—alas, 'twas all in vain. Flames furiously flew, and smoke sullenly soared. The crowd stood heroically back, waiting for someone to enter the blazing inferno. No one moved. Then suddenly from the mass there was seen a small and gallant figure, which bravely strode toward the burning building. The crowd gasped. It was none other than Picklepuss Antone. Straight through a window a trifle undignified, may it be added, went this noble hero—head first. Priest Struggle-buggy, in his excitement, shouted and fell over his long robe. Two long minutes passed. The hero of the night appeared once more, through the window, head first, undignified as before. In his arms he fondly clasped a statue of the goddess Vesta, and in his hands a pair of Roman sandals. A mighty cheer rent the night air, and shook the burning building down. Picklepuss will be crowned with a laurel wreath by Priest Struggle-buggy—maybe. When last seen Priest Struggle-buggy was running agilely down the hill with his flowing coat-tail on fire.
