The living and dining rooms were thrown en suite and tables for play were placed here.

HONEY USED AS COUGH MEDICINE

Honey is quite commonly used as a cough medicine, usually as a home remedy. Those who have studied city markets for honey have been struck with the large amounts bought for use as cough medicine rather than as a food. In some parts of the foreign population, this seems to be a chief reason for buying honey.

For this purpose it has virtues, since honey is soothing. It covers the irritated surface, and the absorption of moisture from the membranes lining the throat doubtless serves to relieve the congestion of the tissues affected. Honey diluted with water is also used as a gargle.

Canada produces more platinum than any other country in the world.
