

This, That, and the Other

By Mrs. Theo. B. Davis

I used to think I knew about all the tricks and short cuts of the trade when it came to caring for babies; but my second son's wife showed me a new stunt when she came up for the day recently with her two little ones. They ate supper before leaving for Dunn and when she took the babies from the table Jo cleaned their hands and faces, took off their daytime clothes and put them into their pajamas. That way, when they reached home, both sure to be asleep they could be wrapped in blankets, and dumped into bed without rousing at all. And you know a small child, suddenly awakened, is liable to be cross.

Can any one tell me what to do besides wearing gloves to keep turnip greens from causing a rash on the hands that cut them? I dash out barehanded most of the time—it seems impossible for me to be efficient with gloves on—and cut enough greens for two days' dinners. And for several days longer I am what Papa used to call "terrified" by the itching and stinging of the rash on my hands. Will anything help it?

Our oldest son, in charge of training in an Army Camp in the Philippine Islands, wrote us that among his new recruits are "twenty-three Bontocs, mostly head hunters." That means when they find a head in war they like to chop it off and cure it, keeping it for a kind of souvenir or trophy. Eric added that they speak no English and but little Ilocano, which, I believe, is a language used by many Filipinos. Of course we need soldiers, and the Filipino Scouts are valuable over there, but I can't help hoping those Bontoc head hunters will not get irritated and start a little war of their own. An insurrection or rebellion, for instance.

It may be a good thing to take down highway signs; they obscure the view most of the time and deface the landscape often; but my husband is going to feel defrauded if the Burma Shave rhymes are among the missing. I had to read those things to him one day clear from here to Buckhead, Georgia. And sometimes the last of the signs would be the first we'd see. In such cases he wanted me to remember them all and say them over to him as soon as the last was passed. I stood it fairly well all morning, but by mid-afternoon would have been willing for every man to wear a long beard.

A news item read last week said there will be no silk available for stockings after March, 1942. Well, by that time the girls will be going barelegged anyway, and we older women can lengthen our skirts if we prefer that to exposing any of ourselves clad in cotton or other substitutes for silk.

That beautiful azaleamum on the table at the Baptist church last Sunday was grown by Mrs. Wiley Broughton, who gave it to me for that place. The white chrysanthemums were also sent by her and the roses with them were some our pastor's father brought here from Pittsboro and which Mrs. Griffin offered me for the church. The Sunday before I used a box of begonias belonging to

Carolina Power and Light Co. Has to Curtail Use of Power

In cooperation with neighboring electric utilities, the Carolina Power and Light Company is now loading interconnection transmission line facilities to capacity in order to transfer surplus electric power to a pool to supply defense industries in the drought-stricken Southeastern section of the country, it was announced by L. V. Sutton, president and general manager of the Carolina Power and Light Company.

Acting under instructions of the Office of Production Management in Washington and in conjunction with Duke Power Company, the Virginia Electric Power Company, the Virginia Public Service Company, the Appalachian Electric Power Company, and the South Carolina Electric and Gas Company, will transmit weekly a combined total of approximately 36,600,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity to the Carolina Aluminum Company at Badin, N. C., and into the Southeastern area where lack of rain and increased demand by defense industries for electric power have brought about a power shortage.

The Carolina Power and Light Company will continue to cooperate with the OPM regarding the continuance of OPM's so-called "blackout" order prohibiting the use of sign lighting, show window lighting, outline and ornamental lighting, outdoor lighting, flood and field lighting for amusement or sports purposes. Under the OPM order the company is compelled to discontinue electric service to any concern or person violating the "blackout" provisions of the order.

Mr. Sutton said his company had made complete preparations to put into effect on Monday of this week the OPM order curtailing by five percent the use of electric power by non-defense industries in the territory served by the company, but the OPM last Thursday night postponed indefinitely the putting into effect of this portion of the order.

Members of all civic organizations in Zebulon are invited to the meeting of the Senior and Junior Woman's Clubs on Tuesday night, November 18, at 8:00 o'clock. At this meeting, after the program, an auction sale will dispose of articles donated for the club debt. These may be brought to the clubhouse Tuesday night and handed to Mrs. Irby Gill of the ways and means committee.

Head of Local School Honored

E. C. Cunningham, Supt. of Corinth-Holder high school, has recently been elected to two important offices by his educational associates. He was chosen president of the Johnston County School Executives and also as president of the Johnston County unit of the North Carolina Educational Association. Neither position was the result of campaigning for election, both being decided on the basis of service and ability, and coming as a surprise to Mr. Cunningham, who has for some years been the head of Corinth-Holder schools.

Rates of payment for planting within special crop allotments under the 1942 Agricultural Conservation Program of the AAA have been announced, according to E. Y. Floyd, State AAA executive assistant at State College.

The rates and other provisions of the program are directed at greater conservation achievements on individual farms and at helping farmers attain record production of farm products needed under the Farm Defense Program.

Payment rates, except for commercial wheat, are somewhat lower than in 1941. The rates include: one and one-quarter cents per pound for cotton; 10 and one-half cents per bushel for commercial potatoes; seven-tenths of

Daniels Home From Mexico

The resignation of Joseph Daniels as ambassador to Mexico has been accepted by President Roosevelt, having been offered because of the health of Mrs. Daniels, who has not been well for some time. Mr. Daniels has given his country devoted service and is said to have done much to bring into being the "good neighbor" policy so earnestly desired between this nation and Mexico. His many friends in his own section are personally glad for him to be in the state again.

The reader may wonder how will Wake county farmers get all this milk, butter, eggs, pork, beef and fruits with the number of cows, hogs, chickens and fruit trees they have, and so do others.

William H. Sawyer, appointed by Judge Harris as clerk of Wake County, has had his handling of office affairs questioned. An audit revealed shortage, it is said, and the bonding company back of him has agreed to pay more than $9,000 to straighten matters out financially.
