This, That and the Other

By Mrs. Theo. B. Davis

At intervals all week I have chuckled over something Mrs. John Broughton told me just after service at our church Sunday night. Our pastor had talked to us about how to study the Bible and had advised that we omit the long tables of genealogy when doing devotional reading. It reminded Mrs. Broughton of when she was a little girl and went to a country church. She said they had a custom of occasionally holding an informal meeting when all who would and could take part rose, read a portion of scripture of their own selection, made comments or not, as they chose, and sat down.

Mrs. Broughton, then little Carrie Gill, decided to read, but told no one about it. Through mistake, or mischance, probably brought on by nervousness, she selected the first chapter of Matthew. To her dismay she found when it was too late to stop that she was into one of those lines of descent. She has never forgotten how she stumbled around over those long names — "Jechonias begat Salathiel; and Salathiel begat Zorobabel; and Zorobabel begat Abiud; and Abiud begat Eliakim—" no wonder she finally quit in confusion and took her seat without making any comments.

When I speak of church nowadays the next thought is of the Raleigh Association, which is to convene here on Thursday, October 29. For the second time it has been decided to hold the sessions on one day only, morning, afternoon and night. That means delegates from the churches will be given dinner and supper.

A committee has been appointed to look after the assembling and serving of food and they plan to have a plate served at noon. Instead of having every housewife bring a box of everything she has time to fix, each woman will prepare only one or two things. My Sunday School class has been asked to be responsible for potato salad to serve 300 and for 200 sandwiches. My husband came into the room as I am telling my son's

Rotary Club Has Mark Osborne As Guest Speaker

The Zebulon Rotary Club continues to urge buying war bonds and getting scrap iron.

Rotarians are giving time each meeting to learn how much scrap iron is collected and making inquiries where more can be found. The sale of war bonds is encouraging and is a credit to our community.

Leon Thompson had the program but on account of the interest shown in discussing sale of war bonds and getting scrap iron his time was limited. Leon had for his speaker Rev. Mark Osborne, pastor of the Bailey and Stanhope Baptist churches. Rev. Osborne recited a darkey's sermon. It was recited well and enjoyed for its humor. He gave another recitation that was enjoyed.

Several Rotarians were absent. We hope they will make up attendance before the next meeting.

With the Boys In the Service

Clarence Watson, of the Army of the U. S., was at home Sunday. He has very recently been transferred to Fort Bragg.

James Pulley, Jr., now with Platoon 23 of the Recruiting Center of the U. S. Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Fla., writes his parents that he enjoyed the trip from here to his post, that he gets plenty of well-cooked food, is feeling fine and is not lonely. He knows some of the boys who left when he did, and the others also seem friendly. He hopes to come home on furlough before long and will be glad for friends here to write him at the address given above. He left Raleigh October 8.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Temple have received a cablegram from their son, Sgt. George H. Temple, saying he had arrived safely in a foreign port and was well. He left from Camp Kilmore, N. J.
