

This, That And
The Other

BY MRS. THEO. B. DAVIS

As a rule I enjoy ordering magazines for our subscribers, giving them the advantage of the reduced rate we offer as an inducement to take our papers. But this winter there has been so much confusion that I almost dread the work. You see magazines are having to use less paper and numbers of them have had their subscription lists frozen. Then the only way you can get on is to wait till someone fails to renew; when, if you are next in line, you get the place. Some accept renewals only; and some will take no subscriptions for less than two years.

Ever so many times this winter we've had notices from this or that publisher changing prices, discounts or other rulings until one can never be sure whether an order will go through. If not, there's more writing to be done both ways, perhaps refunding money with explanations not always understood.

I sent several subscriptions for my son since Christmas. They have not come yet and when he wants to be provoking he says to me, "Mother, those magazines haven't come yet. Are you sure you ordered them?" Then, wisely, he dodges.

In a scientific article I found last week the statement that the human body needs zinc. Already we have been told of needing lime, iron, salt, and a number of other minerals; but I believe no one has yet suggested that we need more brass. Zinc, however, is an alloy used in brass, and it may be the scientists are working in that direction.

One of last week's dailies said that a year ago the ODT asked this state to take concrete steps toward reducing the consumption of gasoline, and said that little had been done to that end.

If only as citizens of the state we make it a personal matter and take enough steps, they need not be concrete; and we could save amazing quantities of gas.

Ladies, take a bow! Having heard numerous expressions complimentary to the Methodist women who served that crowd of 150 at the Rotary meeting last week, I rise to remark that they had a tremendous task and deserve all that was said in praise. Frying that many quarters of chicken makes me tired to think about, let alone cook. My son, Ted, who went up to take pictures of the Rotarians and their guests, said he never saw so many coffee percolators going at one time. He added that he was invited to sit with the elect in the dining room, but found the kitchen, its workers and supplies too enjoyable to leave. I'm ashamed to tell how much he ate back there.

More and more I am inclined to believe in special providences. Although I knew we were to have guests at dinner Tuesday, a combination of circumstances prevented my preparing the dessert I had planned. And while we were eating Mrs. Jethro Stell arrived bringing half a cake still hot from the oven.

LOCAL CLUB CELEBRATES PERFECT ROTARY RECORD

FarmBureauMeets

The Zebulon Farmers Bureau Unit held its first meeting Monday evening at the Wakelon High School. There were 40 members and visitors present in spite of the bad weather.

The program was interesting from start to finish. Delegates who went to the state convention made interesting reports. Mr. Weeks, county agent, explained the unit that is required of farmers. J. E. Lassiter spoke on sweet potato growing and marketing. He showed clearly how the average farmer is missing a good money crop by not planting sweet potatoes for marketing. The following committee was named to make a survey of the possibility of growing potatoes in this vicinity: John Broughton, Prof. Mark Bunn, Hoyle Bridgers and Avon Privette.

Dr. Flowers' Car Found After Search Lasting 24 Hours

Monday night Dr. C. E. Flowers was called on an emergency case over in Nash county near Samaria church. While in the home, he heard the sound of a motor and remarked that it sounded like his car. Hurrying to the front he saw it racing towards the highway. Soon it disappeared in the direction of Rocky Mount. He tried phoning to notify the authorities, but in vain. The car was gone and with it about $500 worth of surgical instruments. And the doctor had no insurance. No other car was available and it appeared he would have to do his professional work on foot for the duration.

For twenty-four hours the suspense continued till early Wednesday morning when he learned that his car was at Cherry Point. Nothing was missing and no damage had been done to the car. He went after the car Wednesday afternoon. It seems that a young man, a marine, who had been courting in the neighborhood had overstayed his leave and it is supposed he desired making a quick trip back to escape AOL punishment. So everybody is happy once more!

The Zebulon Rotary Club celebrated its fourth consecutive year of 100 per cent attendance at a meeting Friday night and 150 Rotarians and their wives, the Rotary Anns, from the 53 clubs in the 189th District were on hand to help.

All past district governors under whom the record attendance was set were present headed by Robert W. Madry of Chapel Hill, the present head of the district. The past district governors are Hal S. Orr of Rocky Mount, H. D. Jones of Graham, William B. Kiker of Reidsville and Carter Darrow of Tarboro.

Chartered on May 3, 1929, the Zebulon Club is credited with a notable achievement. In order to attain a four-year perfect attendance record, it held several meetings in the homes of sick members. One meeting was held in a hospital.

Madry and R. Gregg Cherry, Gastonia legislator and candidate for Governor, were the speakers. All members of the Wendell and Clayton clubs were present, and other clubs from High Point to the coast sent delegations. The celebration was held in the high school home economics building, with Early H. Moser, president of the club presiding.

In his address, Madry said that the 53 clubs and 1,950 members of Rotary in his district "are in a healthy condition and are making a substantial contribution to the war effort and the post-war program."

He said that, internationally speaking, "Rotary occupies a unique position and is determined to make the most of its opportunity in the establishment of a permanent peace after this war." Rotary clubs are located in 50 countries and geographic areas he said.

"Just suppose that each one of our 220,000 members can convince 10 other men that the attainment of world peace is possible through the establishment of understanding and good will among the business and professional men of the world. That would give us 2,200,000 men enlisted in the cause of peace. It seems reasonable that 2,200,000 leaders, united in the same ideal, can secure peace."

Outlining Rotary's post-war plans, Madry said the "number one project of the 220,000 Rotarians and 5,000 clubs call for an inventory now of potential needs for jobs, repairs, replacements, goods, and other services when peace comes."

Cherry called for a "revitalization of interest in public affairs which will bring the attention of civic leaders to the governmental problems of their State and nation, as well as to their local community problems."

The civic club can and should play a highly important part in the shaping and affairs of men and nations and their destinies in the period following the war, he said. He called for an interchange of ideas with civic leaders of other communities to "bring about the solidification of their influences in common causes."
