Waxing heels and toes of stockings with a bit of candle was routine hose economy long ago in wooden-shoe lands of Europe, and it is a practical way to meet stocking problems today. Textile specialists who have put to laboratory tests this old-fashioned custom report that rubbing wax on stockings makes them wear four times as long before holes appear in heels or toes. Tests showed that simplest and most effective method is merely rubbing a piece of candle wax or paraffin on heels and toes before each wearing. Even if the waxing is not repeated until after several launderings, enough wax remains to make stockings feet more durable.

If only a thin film of wax is applied, it will not interfere with the proper laundering of the stockings or change their appearance.

On the job in Connecticut. Line crews came to the rescue from as far away as Detroit.

The big blow twisted the steeple off this Massachusetts church and toppled it into the street across the electric wires. Another headache for hard-working linemen!

THE IMPATIENT YEARS
SOMETHING FOR THE BOYS

LAST FALL, a raging hurricane roared up the eastern seaboard and left a $400,000,000 trail of wreckage from North Carolina to Maine.

Falling trees crushed houses, cars and power lines. Poles were snapped off by the fury of the storm. Hundreds of towns, millions of people had no electric service.

The electric light and power companies moved fast. Line crews worked around the clock. 18-hour stretches were common. Clerks, meter readers—everybody—pitched in to replace workers now at war. Short-wave radio helped direct the job.

Men and equipment came to New England from other electric companies as far west as Ohio and Michigan. In fact, some trucks were already rolling before the storm struck.

In most cases, service was quickly restored. Hospitals got first priority, then war plants. It was a staggering job, swiftly done—and helped immeasurably by the patience and understanding of customers.

This hurricane—like fires, floods, tornadoes across the country—dramatized anew the fact that only a major disaster can interrupt electric service.

It proved again that business-managed electric companies are organized and able to meet any emergency as completely as they met America's greatest emergency—war.
