THANKS TO TOWN BOARD

Having been among those who pleaded for repairs to be made on our streets, we desire also to be among those who express their appreciation of work that has been done. Not for years have all our streets been in better condition, if as good. Drivers are grateful for the improvement.

But our sidewalks are crying loudly for attention. With the rapid growth of grass and weeds, the washing done by rains, the wear of traffic, walking is an uncomfortable process in many parts of town. If weed-cutters might spend some days in destroying the growth that impedes pedestrians, our town might boast of appearing as a model of what well-dressed summer streets should wear. Also what they should not wear.

MUSEUM HALTS FISH STORIES

Raleigh, July 3.—Too many fish stories are going the rounds these days, and the State Museum has decided to do something about it in the way of assisting with the identification and size of the fish that are being caught.

The first collection—bream and sun fish—was brought in recently from Dr. O. S. Goodwin's farm at Apex, and they are having a merry time of it gazing at their visitors. Others will be added, according to Director Harry Davis.

Davis said that with the help of the Soil Conservation Service, farmers of the Wake County section are growing fish "just like raising chickens" and have built about 20 one-acre ponds within the past year. After the first year, each pond should yield at least 240 pounds of fish per year.

"Bass, crappie, and bream do well in fresh water in this State, but if you hear of a bass weighing over 14 pounds, a crappie over two, or a bream over a pound and a half, you send the story-teller to the aquarium at the State Museum," advised Davis.

DID YOU KNOW?

—That the largest harvest of wheat in the history of the United States, some 1,084,000 bushels, is forecast by the Department of Agriculture, while from the mid-west comes the now-familiar story of wheat being dumped on the ground because of lack of storage space and transportation facilities . . . sales of E bonds are lagging behind schedule throughout the nation, despite the intense and patriotic efforts of local bankers, businessmen and housewives to spur sales . . . the outlook for civilian tires is still uncertain, but Akron says once it gets word from Washington, quantity output can begin within a month's time . . . the sheep population of the U. S. has fallen from 50 million in 1942 to 41 million now . . . now householders are buying record quantities of baby chicks . . . construction contracts for the 37 states east of the Rockies are up 57 per cent over the first five months of last year.

The evening of a well-spent life brings its lamps with it.—Joubert.

Air Forces Make Greatest Use Of Service Women

Washington. — The rapidly growing air-mindedness of women, revealing their unusual aptitude for nearly every kind of job in aviation, has been vividly brought to light by the service which they have performed during the war with the air branches of the armed forces.

A survey of American women in uniform discloses that the largest number of Women Marines have been assigned to air work.

One-third of all WAVES have been on duty with the Navy air arm. WACS have played a major role in the vital ground services for the Army Air Forces' Air Transport Command. The same held true for the SPARS.

The WASPS proved outstanding as pilots in ferrying every type of aircraft. And members of the Army Nurse Corps gained new lustre as flight nurses.

More than 800,000 sick and wounded have been flown to safety and care during the war, many of them all the way across the Atlantic or Pacific.

About 60 per cent of the first two graduating classes of the Air Nurses training center at Bowman Field, Kentucky, were former airline stewardesses.

The WACS have been serving in more than 150 different capacities related to flying, many of them overseas. Here are just a few: grease monkeys, radio operators, dispatchers, draftsmen, inspectors, control tower operators, priority and traffic officers, intelligence officers, weather experts, and postal workers.

Some of the air jobs performed by WAVES have been as administrators of tests in low pressure chambers, gunnery instructors, air navigation instructors, aerologists mates, metal smiths, instrument mechanics, store keepers.

Women Marines had to their credit many of the foregoing duties and also such jobs as parachute riggers, electricians, hydraulic specialists, lubricators, propeller specialists, oxygen experts, all branches of radio, and aerial photography.

SPARS did notable work in control towers and in charge of Link trainers.
