

Old Leapin' Lena, the decrepit fire-wagon of the Zebulon Fire Department, has finally been put out to pasture. Just before the last big snow her replacement, a new $7,000 vehicle, arrived, and Leapin' Lena lurched her last. Here the truck is pictured at the last fire it was used against, the second-floor blaze at the Lucas Milling Company. Two days later the truck answered a standby call at the C. B. Eddins residence, but no fire resulted from an overheated oil space heater. As the truck rolled down Horton Street to the Eddins residence at a steady five miles per hour, Worth Hinton was clocked turning the siren at 45 miles per hour. One of the town commissioners suggested that the siren be geared to the engine and the wheels be geared to Worth, but the new fire truck arrived before such action was required. The photograph above was taken by Wayne Privette.
