

This, That, and the Other

camera shot made at the identical instant that at least one liver takes aim and explodes.

Years ago I knew a girl who had a lovely voice and used it freely and generously, singing in church, going to visit sick people and cheering them with songs, and taking part in the group singing that was then very popular. But after a few years she decided that because she did not have the kind of voice that could make her famous there was no use taking time for music. She refused to sing at all.

I was dimly reminded of that girl by my husband's recent behavior. He is fitting up a workshop with real machinery for woodworking and looks forward to having a tremendously good time making the things that can be managed by an elderly man, slightly crippled.

Ever since we were married he has made shelves, changed doors, built play pens for the babies, built what he wanted and could afford; and I've grown to depend on him for everything of that kind. But since he has been fitting up his shop he is unwilling to do anything in the carpentering line, because he fears he can't do it exactly right without the proper machinery. He even refused to saw me two blocks from the trunk of an apple tree he had a colored man dig up, saying he was afraid he'd not get them absolutely flat at the ends. I'm going to sneak out and take his old handsaw and fix those things myself. They are wanted for the bases of some evergreen decorations I have in mind; and I don't need perfection; a reasonable facsimile will be plenty good.

December magazines have hundreds of suggestions for Christmas decoration; some good; some not so good; some just plain silly. For instance: You are advised to bring good cheer into your bedroom by tying bunches of evergreen to the bedposts. Not my bedroom, please; and most positively, not my bedposts. If I went blundering in there in the dark and ran into a bunch of holly or cedar, I'd have to keep telling myself that whoever put it there meant well and didn't really want to hurt me. And it would be hard to hold on to good cheer.

I am dubious about too much green stuff in the house, certainly the berried kinds. Unless these branches are kept in water, they soon begin dropping berries, and there you are — or there some one else is, ready to step on every one that falls. In water they keep exceedingly well; and small twigs stuck in an Irish potato last as long as you want to keep them, if you'll soak the potato in water once in a while.

Some decorator in a leading magazine says blue and white or silver are the true Christmas colors instead of the red and green we more often see.

That may be true; but my unasked advice is that you do not go in too strongly for the blue and silver unless your house is well heated. Merely thinking of that combination in cold weather starts me shivering.

VITAMIN D HOMOGENIZED MILK

Strong bones and sound teeth don't just happen! They are built—and kept—by calcium, phosphorus and Vitamin D. Each quart of our Vitamin D Homogenized Milk supplies all of the calcium, most of the phosphorus and all of the Vitamin D the average person needs each day.

There's more all-around nutrition packed into two glasses of this better milk than in a pound of any other food you can buy. Just compare the cost with other foods—by the pound.

This improved milk is mighty delicious tasting, too. The cream has been broken up and spread through the milk. On cereals, in coffee or by the glass, this is the best milk you've ever tasted. What a wonderful way to get those bone-and-tooth building factors your body needs! Phone in your order today.

Just be sure the added Vitamin D is "Natural", because the only kind of Vitamin D milk sold today that has been scientifically proved effective in helping reduce tooth decay is milk that contains 400 U.S.P. units per quart of "Natural" Vitamin D.
