What goes on here?

Referee makes first down — or did he really just miss it? Field judge blocks out the nearest tackler — or was it clipping? If the officials call 'em — and play too — what kind of a game is that?

You wouldn't stand for that sort of thing on a football field — but it happens every day in the electric light and power business. Government not only regulates the electric companies — but is in competition with them at the same time!

The catch is that government sets up two different sets of rules. Government electric agencies pay little or no interest on borrowed money, and pay no Federal taxes — but electric companies do, and expect to. When government-in-the-power-business can't make ends meet — it gets a handout of tax money from the U. S. Treasury. Who foots the bill? American taxpayers — of whom you are one.

If government can get into the light and power business this way — it can get into every other business in just exactly the same way.

In sixty-odd years, the self-supporting electric companies have built for America the most and the best electric service in the world. While costs of everything else are way up (including the costs of making and delivering electricity) electric service is still the best bargain in the American family's budget . . . it does so much, and costs so little.

This is a good record for the thousands of people who work in power companies, and for the millions of people who invest savings in them.

Don't you think these men and women deserve a fair break?

The answer is yours to make, for government money is your money.
