RED CROSS GIRL

Here's one bathing beauty at home in or on the water. She's a volunteer faculty member at a Red Cross national aquatic school for water safety and small craft handling.

Boating Is Added To CP&L Lake

Boating soon will be added to the attractions of Morrow Mountain State Park, it was announced by State Park Superintendent Thomas W. Morse recently.

Under agreement with the Carolina Power & Light Company, the Park Division has graded an access road down to Tillery Lake at the old Lowder's Ferry site at the edge of the Park. Here it is planned to construct docks and other facilities.

Sanitary facilities and a concession stand are also planned for boating and fishing. Rowboats will be available for rent, and the Division will particularly encourage the use of row boats and sail boats, Morse announced.

Work on a parking area is partially complete, but has been delayed to finish excavation and research on some interesting Indian remains unearthed there.

Politicking Proves Tiring To Newspaper Publisher

Oh, this politicking is back-breaking stuff, especially when a candidate has to make a living five days a week which leaves only Saturday to circulate around and visit with people. I thought it would be an easy job to drop in and chat a moment and then cruise on down the road. That's not always the case.

Last Saturday I found a whole lot of people that have had so many candidates call upon them that they were fed up with the whole idea of politics.

"The woods are full of politicians," said one filling station operator. "Yeah," said a gentleman occupying the fourth nail keg on the left, "if you fired a shotgun in any direction, you'd hit at least six of 'em."

I found that the wide-brimmed western style hat I ordered six months ago just isn't the right thing to wear while calling on folks out in the country. My everloving wife, Judy, can't bear to look at me when I wear it. It's so funny to her that she rolls on the floor and laughs.

Saturday morning I walked into a store wearing that hat. I knew the gentleman who ran the store was no supporter of mine, but I figured maybe he could be converted. (He couldn't.) After I left, he said: Look at that guy. Comes

YDC Plans Meet On Friday Night; To Hear Barkley

The principal meeting of the year for Young Democrats of North Carolina will be held in Greenville on Friday, April 28, according to Terry Sanford, State YDC president.

Vice-President Alben W. Barkley will make the principal address, and Mrs. Barkley has been invited to accompany him to North Carolina. The occasion will be the first annual Young Democratic Roosevelt Dinner, and over 1,500 young and old Democrats are expected to fill the Wright Auditorium at East Carolina Teachers College where the festivities will be staged.

Governor Scott and other party and state leaders are scheduled to attend. The Vice-President will be accompanied on his trip by Congressman Herbert Bonner, in whose district the dinner is being held, as well as other members of the North Carolina Congressional Delegation. Hoover Taft, of Greenville, former YDC president, is chairman of the distinguished guests committee.

YDC Dinner headquarters will be opened at the Hotel Proctor in Greenville and the Hotel Kingston, and registration will start in each of these hotels at 2:00 p. m. on the day of the Dinner. The Women's Division of the Democratic Party has scheduled a conference for the afternoon at the Hotel Proctor. The Lenoir County YDC will provide a reception at the Hotel Kingston in the afternoon.

Arrangements for the dinner are in the hands of a committee headed by J. B. Spilman, Jr., of Greenville. Other members are James Dorsett of Raleigh, Rivers Johnson, Jr., of Warsaw, Ed Redwine of Charlotte, Courtney Mitchell, Jr., of Kinston, E. S. Peele, Jr., of Williamston.

in here in a hill-billy hat and expects us to vote for him!"

There are plenty of chances to practice talking wherever I go. But at one place I found myself out-talked in a big way. The gentleman called me to the back of his place of business, and proceeded to give me a spiel about a new salve which he had developed guaranteed to cure arthritis, rheumatism, headaches, and stomach ulcers.

"This little cloth," the gentleman said, "contains the contents of a full jar of salve. The salve is made of clove oil and certain secret ingredients which drive the clove oil into the flesh. Just as the clove oil draws the pain from a rotten tooth, just so it will drive the pain out of your bones." He went on to tell how it would draw the fever and pain away from stomach ulcers, so that the little ulcers could not make big ulcers and would dry up and go away. It sounded good, and if I could talk just half as good, I'd be a cinch for the job I'm after.

Politics makes for good clean fun, though. Mr. Chamblee, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Liles can join me in laughing at the gentleman who accused me of seeking the job for the big pay involved. There just ain't no such thing as big pay for a county commissioner.

YOU PAY YOUR MONEY AND TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Typical of the campaigns being waged by the three candidates for United States Senator from North Carolina is the scene shown above on the marquee of one of the larger hotels in North Carolina where all three candidates have headquarters. First is the sign stating: "Mr. Smith Is Going To Washington." Immediately above it, a streamer reads: "Our Bob Will Be in Washington to Receive Mr. Smith." And topping them both is the statement: "Frank Graham Is Already There!"

Editor Is Delighted With Piano Pupils

We note with interest the increasing number of local adults who are taking piano lessons. There are no two ways about it — it helps them and the community. Furthermore, it confirms our belief that a person can get an education even if he is denied college training.

Many of our readers will recall that Capus Waynick, now ambassador to Nicaragua, and his wife learned Spanish (virtually a prerequisite for a diplomat in Latin America) with a set of recordings in just six weeks. The interpreter your editor used in the Dutch East Indies was a buck sergeant who learned the Malayan tongue the same way.

Few of these persons taking piano will find it aids them in quite the way the two persons mentioned above used things they learned after reaching their twenty-first birthday, but they will find added pleasure in music. And, after all, God meant for us to have pleasure along with the tears.

Your editor's only daughter has a voice that would put a large-sized foghorn to shame, and she doesn't mind using it.

The other night Ann had talked and talked, and asked questions galore, while all the time the editor was trying to compose an especially difficult letter. Finally he got fed up, and brusquely told his daughter to be quiet.

"I don't have to be quiet," she stated importantly. "I'm a woman."

Two Local Boys In Campbell Court

S. G. Flowers and Johnny Alford of Zebulon are Gentlemen of the Court for the May Day exercises at Campbell College, Buies Creek, on May 6. Campbell College will be host to high school seniors in eastern Carolina on that day, and Bob Lasater of Buies Creek and Marshale Moody of Siler City will resign as May King and Queen.

High School students will spend Saturday as guests of the college. The most recent installation they will see will be the new light on Taylor Ball Park.

ONE OF MANY

W. W. WILLIAMS, JR.

Lots of Activity In House Contest

W. W. Williams, Jr., insurance man from Raleigh, was a visitor in the Record office yesterday, making the call on a tour of Wake County. He is one of the 13 men seeking the three seats in the House of Representatives allotted Wake County.

Bill, as he prefers to be known, is a member of Episcopal Church in Raleigh, the Jr. and Sr. Chambers of Commerce, and the Civitan Club.

Phil Whitley of Wendell, prominent lawyer and business man, has also been a frequent visitor. He is waging a spirited campaign over the county, gaining friends daily.

Earl Purser from Raleigh, Rt. 3, called last week to announce his candidacy. He is a Wake Forest College graduate, and after serving with the armed forces, taught school.

Jimmy Little, the lone incumbent seeking reelection, is basing his campaign on the experience he has gained during his term of office. Of the remaining incumbents, W. W. Hatch was appointed a judge by Gov. Kerr Scott, and Arch T. Allen, who is exceedingly popular in this community, decided to devote his time to his business.

L. W. Umstead of Garner, who is seeking election to the County Commissioner's seat held by T. Floyd Adams of Willow Springs, was a visitor in Zebulon ten days ago. He is a retired school principal, and is now active in farming.

Bulletin Published On Cattle Parasites

The State College Extension Service announces publication of "Controlling External Parasites of Livestock," an eight-page circular prepared by Walter M. Kulash, associate entomologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station. Copies are available on request.

Purpose of the circular is to review recent developments in the use of insecticides for killing flies and other insect pests of farm animals as well as to answer some questions about the present status of DDT and its use.

Kulash emphasizes that DDT, once generally accepted for fly control on animals as well as for residual control in dairy barns and other farm buildings, is no longer recommended for insect control on animals producing milk for human consumption or in any places where milk might be contaminated.

A number of other insecticides besides DDT have been used not only in fly control but also in limited tests for the control of external parasites of livestock. These materials include methoxychlor, TDE (DDD), toxaphene, chlordane, and purified benzene hexachloride (lindane). Kulash describes the characteristics and use of each of these.

The author asserts that sanitation is just as important in fly control as is the proper use of insecticides. In many cases, he says, failure of insecticides to control flies has really been a failure in observing ordinary sanitation methods on the farm.

Dr. Jensen Speaks To Rotary Club

Dr. James H. Jensen, plant pathologist at North Carolina State College in Raleigh, was guest speaker before members of the Zebulon Rotary Club last Friday night, and talked of the many diseases which attack plants in North Carolina. The speaker was introduced by Dr. L. M. Massey, who complimented Dr. Jensen on the splendid work being done in his department.

Dr. Jensen held the close attention of his audience as he explained the difference in the diseases which attack plants. He brought for examination specimens of mold, fungi, and other organisms which attack plant life.
