

Softball Is Scheduled Five Nights This Week At Wakelon Diamond

A full week of softball play beginning tonight at 7:30 is scheduled for local players and fans. Because of graduation exercises games were not scheduled Friday night or last night.

Tonight's games pit the Woodchoppers against Pilot at 7:30 and Vets against Pearce at 9:00 with the latter teams the home clubs. Tomorrow night: Guard at Glory, Woodchoppers at Pearce. Thursday night: Legion at Wildcats, Beck at Scribes. Friday night: Glory at Guard, Pearce at Woodchoppers.

Ladies to Play

Rev. Carlton Mitchell, softball commission chairman, announced yesterday that there will be a twilight game between two ladies' teams Thursday evening at 6:00.

Box scores for previous games have not been published in the Record because managers have failed to turn in scorebooks to Ferd Davis, league statistician. Managers are reminded that credit cannot be given toward batting championships for hits made in any game unless box scores are turned in at the Record office.

Open League

In the Open League Pilot and Glory have each won one game, while the Woodchoppers and Vets have each lost one. Pearce and the National Guard have not yet had a game scheduled.

Legion 11, Scribes 9

Two walks, an error, and a home run by Hardin Hinton in the first inning gave the American Legion an edge which the Scribes were unable to overcome in Thursday night's nightcap, although 4 unearned runs in the fourth inning provided the winning margin for the Legionaires.

The Scribes got onto Bill Perry's pitching, and Mitchell was rushed in to put out the fire. He was greeted with two runs—a triple by Lawrence Liles and a single by Ned Moss after issuing a walk to Warren Greene, but settled down to strike out nine Scribe batsman in the last three innings.

Cotton Publication

The State College Extension Service announces publication of a revised, up-to-date edition of Extension Circular No. 312, "Cotton Insect Control in North Carolina," which contains latest recommendations for control of boll weevils and other insects affecting cotton.

The revised edition was prepared by Walter M. Kulash, associate research entomologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station, and George D. Jones, in charge of extension entomology, who point out that the new organic insecticides have given a well-timed boost to control of cotton insects.

The authors estimate that in 1946 only 50 tons of insecticides were used on cotton in North Carolina, whereas the total in 1948 was more than 1,250 tons and perhaps twice that much in 1949.

Principal insecticides used are benzene hexachloride (alone or in combination with DDT), toxaphene, and chlordane. All are poisonous but reasonably safe to use if proper precautions are taken. The effect of benzene hexachloride on different soils and crops is not yet fully known. For this reason it is suggested that it not be used on land that will be planted to root crops such as peanuts and Irish potatoes the next year.

In years when boll weevils are expected to be abundant, as in 1950, Kulash and Jones recommended that dusting of the cotton crop be started when the first squares begin to appear. After squares begin to form, two or three additional applications should be made to keep infestation below 10 per cent.

Free copies of Extension Circular No. 312 (Revised) may be obtained from the local county agent or by writing the Agricultural Editor, State College Station, Raleigh.
